BRITISH FIRM BACKS BIG LOAN TO SHANGHAI

JAPAN HIT BY TYPHOON

MAIN RAILWAY BREAKDOWN

BIG LANDSLIDE DISASTER

RAGING OVER WIDE AREA

Tokyo, Nov. 15.

A very severe typhoon has struck the Pacific coast of Japan and is raging over an astonishingly wide area. Considerable loss of life and damage to property is feared, but information is scanty owing to the early breakdown of communications.

The violent storm swept in last night from the Pacific after having pursued a semi-circular path from the east coast of the Philippines, and within a brief while had wrecked telegraph and telephone lines and had caused the suspension of the main railway between Tokyo and Osaka.

LANDSLIDE DISASTER.

As far as can be gathered, at least seven Prefectures are experiencing winds of high velocity, but although much damage is feared, details are not yet available.

Two serious disasters have been reported up to the present moment. In Yokohama, a big landslide occurred, hundreds of tons of earth crashing down from a hillside and burying thirty houses.

Furious efforts are being made in an effort to save inmates who may be still alive in the ruins although unable to get out. Three bodies have been recovered by the search parties.

NUMAZU FIRE TERROR.

In Numazu, some fifty miles to the south-west of Yokohama, the collapse of a house caused an outbreak of fire, which fanned by the tempest, swept through the whole district. Five hundred houses were destroyed by the blaze, and hundreds of people have been rendered homeless. No details of casualties are yet available.—Reuter.

B.B.C.'S TENTH ANNIVERSARY

AMAZING GROWTH OF BROADCASTING

London, Nov. 14. The British Broadcasting Corporation is this week celebrating with special programmes its tenth anniversary.

When the Corporation, under Royal Charter, took over the control of broadcasting on November 14th, 1922, there were 18,000 wireless licence holders in Britain. To-day there are over five million. The total programme time ten years ago averaged thirty-three hours a week as compared with eight-thirty hours at present.

A large and flourishing industry has developed with the growth and popularity of broadcasting and now nearly 200,000 people are directly employed in the manufacture of wireless sets, while last year nearly £20,000,000 were spent in Britain on the purchase of sets and accessories.—British Wireless.

TEA RESTRICTION SCHEME

AGREEMENT REPORT PREMATURE

London, Nov. 15. The Financial Times says that reports that an agreement has been reached between British and Dutch producers regarding tea restrictions are premature.

None of the governments concerned have yet declared their willingness to cooperate in the scheme, though it is believed that the negotiations will ultimately prove successful.—Reuter.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN TRADE

SOVIET DOES NOT REPLY TO BRITISH NOTE

London, Nov. 14. The Prime Minister, in the House of Commons, stated that no reply has yet been received from the Soviet Government to the British Note of 17th October regarding the termination of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement. Last Friday, the Foreign Secretary, in conversation with the Soviet Ambassador, impressed upon him that so far from seeking to injure Anglo-Russian trade as had been suggested in some quarters, the British Government desired to secure its development on proper terms.—British Wireless.

HURRICANE TOLL

CAYMAN ISLANDS DISASTER

MANY DEATHS AND HEAVY DAMAGE

London, Nov. 14. The disastrous hurricane which demolished Vera Cruz with terrible loss of life, also wrecked much havoc on British islands in the zone.

Telegrams from Jamaica, received at the Colonial Office regarding the effect of the hurricane in the West Indies, report that the full force of the storm struck Cayman Islands.

In Cayman Brac, sixty-seven persons are known to have been killed and over a hundred injured. All stores and houses there and in Lesser Cayman were completely destroyed.

The Royal Mail s.s. Loch Katrine is carrying stores and doctors from Kingston. The only material damage occurred on Grand Cayman but in Lesser Cayman many persons were injured.

In Jamaica, where two deaths are reported, the loss in bananas was not less than five million stems, but apart from smashed wharves and the wrecking of one hotel on the north coast the damage to other property is comparatively small.

The Governor of the Bahamas reports the total destruction of crops in Long Island, Rum Cay and San Salvador. Two persons were drowned and one died from shock.

King's Message.

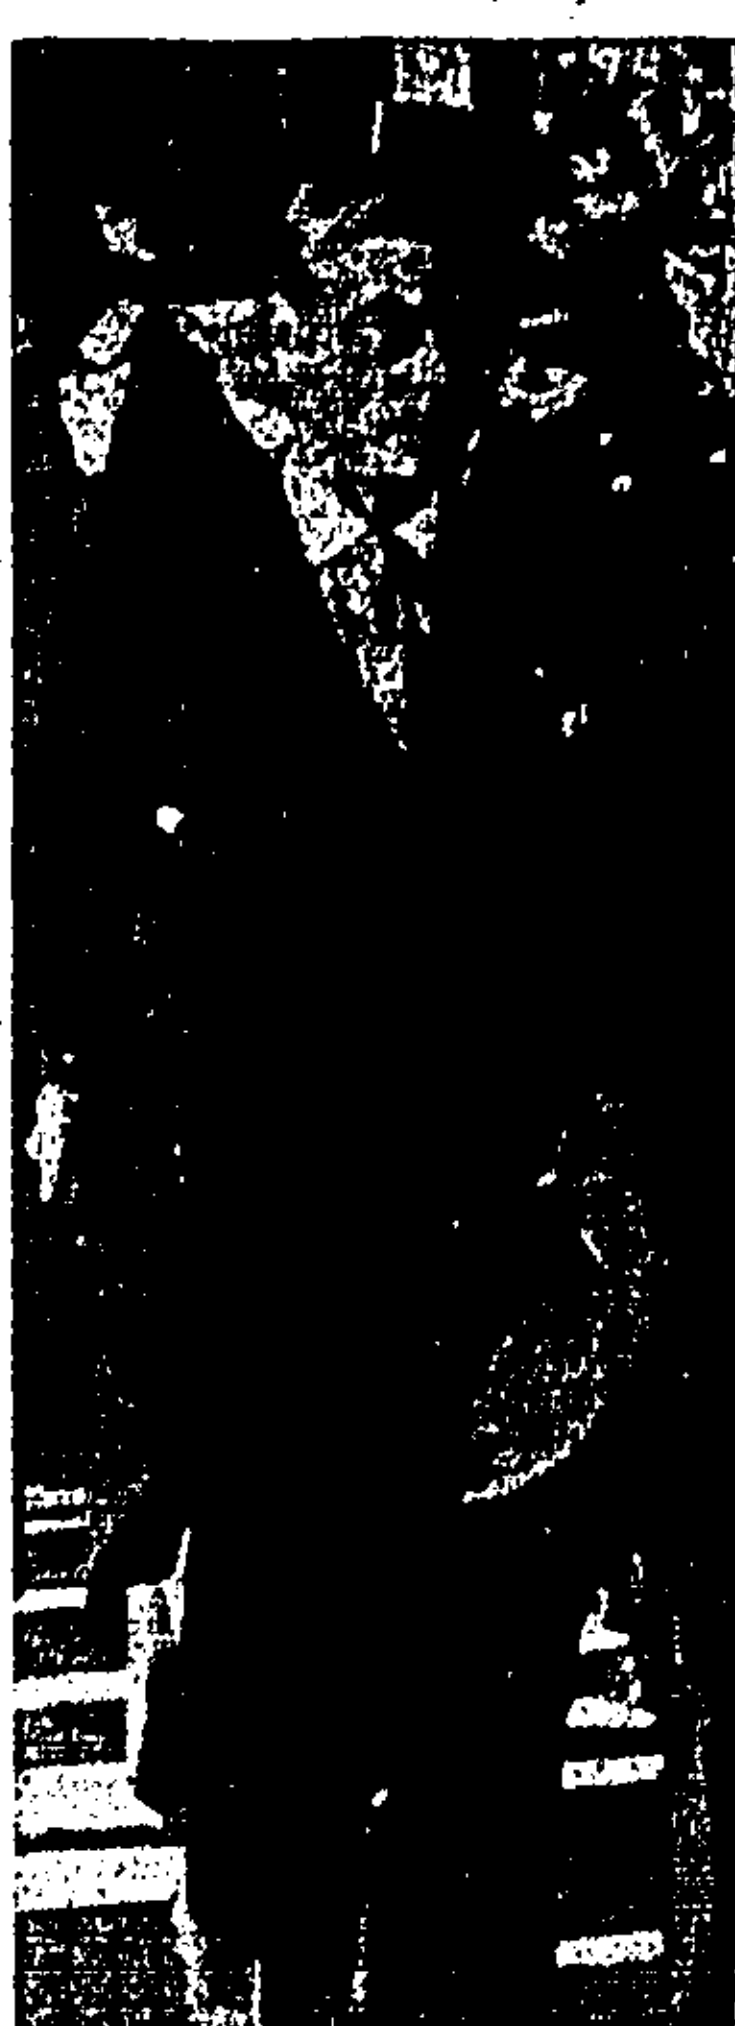

The King has sent a message conveying his profound sympathy to the inhabitants of Cayman Islands. The Colonial Secretary, in a telegram to the Officer Administering the Government of Jamaica states: "Much distressed at news of heavy loss of life and property in Cayman Islands. Am glad to note you are taking all possible steps to render assistance. Please convey my deepest sympathy to the people of Cayman Island.—British Wireless."

YAUMATI FIRE

Building Completely Guttered

ONE OF A SERIES

Fires have been breaking out with marked regularity during the past month and another was added to the number during the early hours of this morning when a conflagration took toll of the entire building situated at 281, Reclamation Street. Fortunately, there was no loss of life or injury to persons.

The outbreak had its origin in the ground floor of the building where a Chinese medicine shop, the Pak Fuk Tong had its headquarters. It is believed that an oven which was used to dry herbs set the premises ablaze, the staircase acting as a due for the flames, which soon spread to the upper floors.

The Kowloon Fire Brigade were summoned to the scene and instantly set to work fighting the outbreak which was not subdued until the three floors had been almost completely gutted.

It is understood that the medicine shop was insured for $3,000.

CANTON ROAD VICTIM.

A victim of the fire at 972, Canton Road on Wednesday morning last, Wong Cheung, aged 49, who was admitted to Kowloon Hospital suffering from severe injuries caused by a fall in attempting to escape down a drain pipe, died at 5.55 a.m. yesterday.

TRADE BARRIERS IN EUROPE

BRITAIN & EXCHANGE RESTRICTIONS

London, Nov. 14. Asked if any arrangements had been reached with the Hungarian Government to relax the exchange restrictions affecting British trade, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, Major Colville said the position was unsatisfactory.

It was, he said, one of particular difficulty and was necessitating special consideration.

Regarding the Greek currency restrictions, Major Colville said, the Government were not satisfied with the treatment of British creditors and representations were being made to the Greek Government.—British Wireless.

PARLIAMENT BUILDING OPENING

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Nov. 15.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is paying his first official visit to Northern Ireland to-morrow when he will formally open the magnificent new building of the Ulster Parliament.

Among the preparations in anticipation of the Royal visit, an extensive programme of street decoration in Belfast has been abandoned at the request of the Prince.

Nevertheless elaborate arrangements are being made for the Prince's reception. Shopkeepers are making Belfast gay with flags and bunting, while eight thousand Orangemen volunteers and stewards will supplement the two thousand police lining the streets.

STORMONT PARADE.

Two thousand troops will salute the Prince at Stormont, where the Parliament Building is situated.

Two cruisers will form a naval guard for the Prince from Liverpool to the harbour in Belfast, while Ulster bombing squadrons have been rehearsing their part in the ceremonies, which include the provision of an aerial escort from Liverpool and a demonstration over the Parliament buildings while the opening ceremony is being performed.

DISTINGUISHED GATHERING.

There will be a distinguished gathering at the opening, arrangements having been made to accommodate five thousand leading residents of Northern Ireland in a special enclosure outside.

BRITISH "PLAN" TO-MORROW

AT DISARMAMENT BUREAU

A GIANT STRIDE?

London, Nov. 14.

The Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, who reached Geneva to-day, had long conversations with the President of the Disarmament Conference, Mr. Arthur Henderson, the chief American delegate, Mr. Norman Davis, and various other delegates.

He will announce his new contribution to a general solution of the disarmament problem at Wednesday's meeting of the Bureau.

Important speeches made by Sir John Simon and Mr. Baldwin in Friday night's Commons debate on disarmament gave an indication of the general principle upon which the British Government have framed their policy.

The actual proposals which Sir John Simon will make are expected to be of far-reaching scope. It is, however, understood that they have been designed with strict regard to the realities of the situation and are not to be regarded as counter-proposals to those which have been made by other delegations.

They are intended to be a helpful contribution towards a practical solution of the problem and are not necessarily fresh "Plan."—British Wireless.

SPEED BOAT BLOWS UP

OWNER RESCUED BY DINGHY

The speed boat Nippy, belonging to Mr. Pettitt, of Poole, blew up in the estuary of the rivers Colne and Blackwater, eight miles from Clacton-on-Sea, with its owner on board.

The boat was destroyed, but Mr. Pettitt was saved.

The flames and smoke were seen for miles. The Clacton-on-Sea lifeboat was called out, and arrived in time to save some of the wreckage.

Mr. Pettitt had been staying at Nelford House, Walton-on-the-Naze, and about 2 p.m. left in his speed boat to go to Ramsdale.

He was seen by the coastguards passing Clacton. Apparently he got as far as Colne Point, where the rivers Colne and Blackwater run into the North Sea, when his engine failed.

He was seen by the barge Leonard Piper trying to restart the engine. It back-fired, and in a moment the speed boat was a mass of flames, and blew up with a loud explosion, Mr. Pettitt being flung into the sea.

Fragments of the boat were scattered far and wide, and a near-by fishing boat put out a dinghy and picked Mr. Pettitt up. He was rowed ashore at Colne Point, on the St. Oysth marshes.

$6,000,000 ISSUE

RECONSTRUCTION IN WAR AREAS

NEGOTIATIONS COMPLETE

Shanghai, Nov. 15.

What is regarded as commencing a new era in Anglo-Chinese friendship has been heralded by the announcement that the well-known British firm of Benjamin and Potts is underwriting, guaranteeing and issuing a $6,000,000 loan to the Municipality of Greater Shanghai.

The loan will be devoted solely to the rehabilitation of the war-devastated areas of Greater Shanghai and certain important schemes of development.

Months of planning were required before the details of the loan were developed and finally completed by Mr. T. V. Soong, the Finance Minister of the National Government, Mr. Wu Tieh-chen, Mayor of Greater Shanghai, and Mr. Ellis Hayim, the prominent Shanghai financier.

WHARFAGE SECURITY.

Security for the loan is in the wharfage dues of Shanghai and all arrangements for the service of the loan will be taken over by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation.

Mr. Wu Tieh-chen, in an interview with Reuter, said: "It is a matter of real gratification that a British group has come forward to assist the City Government in raising the money essential for reconstruction work in Shanghai."—Reuter.

£147,000 CARGO OF SILVER COIN

UNLOADED SECRETLY

A cargo of silver coin, worth £147,000, was lifted secretly from the steamer Premier at a London wharf to-day.

Scotland Yard detectives last night kept watch over the sealed hold.

The cargo comprises 2,200,000 two-zloty Polish coins (21 zlots to the £), which are to be taken in vans to the British mint and melted down. The silver will then be minted into ten-zloty coins.

This marks the withdrawal in Poland of the old two-zloty piece which depreciated in 1927, and the introduction of a new ten-zloty piece, worth approximately 6s. 8d.

When the new zloty coinage was introduced and the first shipments of notes arrived from London, a dock worker at Danzig stole a case of 1,000-zloty notes. The Government burned the remaining notes of the same denomination, and the case of paper was useless to the thief.

The police discovered the case buried in his back garden and charged him not with stealing money but with the theft of a case of paper. He received a short sentence.

When the Kaprin had passed Bear Island a woman gave birth to a boy child. Mother and child were both well when the ship reached Tromsø.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

As a general rule it is best for the declarer to pick up the outstanding trump, but in the following hand the declarer must establish his side suit before touching trump unless forced to by the opponents, and then he must be careful not to take the finesse.

The Bidding

South, the dealer, opened the bidding with one heart. West overcalled with one spade. North, well satisfied with spades, passed. East then bid two clubs. South bid two diamonds. West passed and now North went to two No Trump. East passed and South bid three hearts which North carried to four hearts. West made a poor double.

The Play

The natural opening for West was the ace of clubs. But his partner had not a club, and the ace of clubs was put up at once. West's heart opened the ace of spades. East played the seven of spades. Declarer returned to play the ace of hearts. West made a very nice play of trumping the ace of hearts with the king. But the declarer was not deceived by going right to the ace of hearts and then leading the rest of clubs which was won in dummy with the ace. A small diamond was led from dummy and when East played the ace, the declarer overtook the queen, which held the trick. The ace of diamonds was then led which captured West's jack.

Declarer next played a small diamond and regardless of what West does, the declarer can make his contract. Perhaps the best defence was where West played the king of hearts, dummy un-carrying the seven of clubs and East played the 10 of diamonds. The ace of clubs was led by West, but the declarer trumped with the eight of hearts. All he had to do now was to lead the 10 of hearts from dummy, win in his own hand with the jack, and the rest of his tricks were good for four odd doubled.

USE OF MIND

MR. J. D. BUSH'S ADDRESS TO CHINESE STUDENTS

An inspiring address on the use of leisure was delivered to Christian students at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. on Sunday morning by Mr. J. D. Bush, the speaker said.

When I was asked several weeks ago to address you on this Sunday gathering for students, I felt I had no choice but to accept. The compulsion came from the fact that I learnt of your keenness and enthusiasm to attend these lectures. Both my esteemed friend, Dr. Y. H. Tsao and Mr. Fu, the Students Secretary, have given me so much to listen to what your senior contemporaries have to tell you or impart to you a life from the many angles of vision. Like the speakers before me, I do not come to pour maxims down into your throat. All that I want to do is to point out to you one of the many signposts on the high road of life directing the observant and vigilant to the right path leading to things of interest and value or eternal verities.

One of those signposts to which I wish to direct your attention for a few minutes is the use of leisure. Is it not true that the greatest question with life, from youth to old age, is how we spend our time? The most important thing to learn in life, in short, is how to use time purposefully and usefully. Deducting the time required for sleep, for meals, for dressing and undressing, for exercises, for social functions, how little remains at our own disposal in which to develop the mind, intellect or the higher self. Not so very many years ago, I was a student like you. Speaking then from the experience of a student and a teacher I know your problems quite intimately. In the golden season of youth, when the blood is tingling in your veins and when there is always plenty in everything to be squandered, soon and at we may waste our power, physically, intellectually and spiritually. And you will have to run through quite a cycle of experience before you come to yourself. Some will never come to themselves, spiritually as well as intellectually they will remain anchorless.

Being anchorless, this class of youth will obviously go on drifting like timbers in the high seas. Youth, in general, may be divided into three categories. First, forming the majority are those who seek only entertainment in the form of dancing, gambling, cinema, a little dissipation, preferably in the out-of-the-way places, some distance from home. They are incapable of making themselves happy without having to pay entertainment fees. In other words, they have yet to learn to appreciate the difference between pleasure-seeking and pleasure-finding. I know how hard it is to be at once young and wise.

Devotion to Sports

The second class of youth consists of those who are devoted to sports and many make games the business of life. In China of today, everything should be done to encourage sports and sportsmanship. There is a good deal to be said for the Duke of Wellington said at the Battle of Waterloo being won on the playing field of Eton College. And time spent in innocent and rational enjoyments, in healthy games, in social and family intercourse is well and wisely spent. Nevertheless time given up entirely to pleasure and recreation would of course be not only selfish, but intolerably insipid. Perhaps this class of youth may be too young to care for the goods of the mind. The average run of mankind, a philosopher has said: in youth spends money on love, in middle age on food and in old age on medicine.

The worth of a life is to be measured ultimately by intellectual power and moral stature. This leads me to consider the third class of youth. They are comparatively few in number and they are those who are devoted to hobbies—chiefly literature, science, art (I include photography) music and wireless. As a teacher, I am strongly in-

CONVICTED.

EMBEZZLEMENT DURING 8-YEAR PERIOD

At the conclusion of the case against Taul Wan-chung, charged with embezzlement, before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, the accused was found guilty and sentenced to the maximum summary sentence of six months' hard labour.

Taul was the manager in charge of the local export office of the Shing Tak Weaving Factory of Shanghai, and the defalcations were said to have commenced very shortly after his assumption of the post eight years ago and to have continued until October last when he was arrested upon a complaint lodged with the Police by the head office. Although the total amount involved was alleged to have totalled over $15,000, for the purposes of the trial only two items, $198 and $98 respectively, were selected for investigation.

Mr. Horace Lo was for the prosecution and Mr. F.C.E. Rendall for the defence.

Interested in this group for they are really the salt of the earth. They are the kind of young men who are never dull or they know that the value of time; snatch, seize and enjoy every moment of it to learn something, do something and understand something. Their pleasures belong to the realm which follows the law of increasing and not of diminishing returns. The more a youth clings to these hobbies, the more he knows about it, the more absorbing is the interest of it. There is indeed no season of the year and no time of life at which interest ceases. The interest goes on to venerable old age.

Read Good Books

If I can proffer you a bit of advice, develop your taste, for books, not the ephemeral trash of the time, but the great books that have stood the test of time. From these great books you shall get, not only the most lasting pleasure, but a standard by which to measure our own thoughts, the thoughts of others, and the excellence of the literature of our own day. It is the higher and intelligent life that you should strive to attain. There is no royal road to learning. Each man has to find his own path to intellectual and moral attainments. The higher you climb the harder the climb. Withal, there is much of the sweetness of the sweet in sad and he sad in sweet.

There is a passage in Romola in which George Eliot describes, this kind of inexperience of the scholar. We can only have the highest happiness, such as goes along with being a great man, by having wide thoughts, and much feeling for the best of the world as well as ourselves; and this sort of happiness is ten times more precious than that which we can only get from pain by its being what we would choose before everything else, because our soul sees it is good.

If you would advance in life, begin to advance from within, and wealth and honour will be added unto you. If I were you, I would not be over-anxious about wealth (wealth too often pecunia olet) and honour, and be more anxious about the advancement of your own people and country; in other words, strive for leadership. I will close this address as the time is creeping on fast, with these words from Viscount Haldane:

"Your way is clear—to get the best you can for yourselves in this generally unkind period of your lives, and to strive with all your power to make the fullest use of what you have got, and to impart it to those around you. It is so that you will begin to fulfil the duty you have to discharge now, and will have to discharge still more later on in life—of striving to develop the soul of the people to whom you belong."

Give some of your leisure to the achievement of the highest good in life—loyalty to the Highest Good.

CALL of the WEST

BY R. G. MONTGOMERY

CHAPTER XXII.

Donna let the big roan take his own course. She was suddenly aware that the reason she did not want to marry Dudley Winters was because she did not love him. The rush of mingled feelings that had almost swept aside her control when she faced Stanley Black had been a revelation to her. One thing made it easier for her to think of marrying Dudley. That was the fact that Stanley obviously did not share her feelings. He could not possibly have acted so cool and controlled if he cared for her.

The roan, left to his own devices, took a short cut that led straight to the camp. Donna was not aware of this until they entered a little clearing at the lower edge of which stood a neat log cabin. Trees shaded the place and made it an inviting picture. Suddenly the girl realized that she was hot and thirsty. She pulled the roan to a halt at the open door of the cabin. Here was a chance to get a drink.

At the top of her quirt on the door moulding, a woman's voice answered. A second later a dark-eyed Spanish girl appeared at the door. She had seen Donna approaching and had made a hasty attempt to toss aside several articles that lay about. Donna smiled.

"Could I beg a drink of water?" "Yes, Miss. Will you come inside and rest?" The little Spanish girl was very attractive and her voice was alluringly soft.

Donna stepped inside and sank into the chair offered her. The cabin had two rooms, one a kitchen and living room, and the other a bedroom with two cots. Everything was clean and neatly arranged. A bright shawl hung from the image of a dancing girl occupying a little shelf in one corner. Donna could feel the romantic atmosphere of the place and she settled back with a sigh.

"You ride far?" the Spanish girl asked. Her wide, dark eyes were fastened on Donna's riding boots and trousers.

"Not so far, but I'm thirsty just the same," Donna met the dark eyes and decided that the little senorita was as attractive as any maid from old Seville.

"I go for water. Excuse please!" The girl bowed and vanished out of a back door.

Donna sat looking curiously about. An object caught her eye and held it. It was a buckskin glove such as most cowboys wear. The right glove. Donna's eyes narrowed and a queer stab that might have been a jealous went through her heart. She remembered that Stanley Black had worn no glove on his right hand. Donna caught herself up short. She had no right to criticize. He had never by the slightest word pledged himself. Still she had not thought of him as a man who would amuse himself with such a girl as the one who had just stepped outside.

Her hostess returned with a pitcher and a glass. Donna drank deeply and gratefully. "Thank you," she murmured.

The Spanish girl sat down and folded her hands.

"You live here with your parents?" Donna asked.

"With my father. He works for the timber company." A wide smile spread over the features of the girl. "I know many boys at the camp."

"What is your name?" Donna asked absently. The glove on the floor beside the cot held her attention in spite of herself.

"Rosa Trujillo." The Spanish girl noticed Donna's eyes on the glove. With a blush she picked it up and put it on a little stand. "The handsome cowboy forgot his glove," she said naively.

"The handsome cowboy from Blind River?" Donna prompted.

Rosa nodded. "From Blind River, yes. The cowboys come from Blind River over the hill trail."

"Do many of them come this way?"

"Not many now. Only one. Trouble come with the timber company," Rosa explained.

Donna rose. "I am very thankful for the drink and for the rest," she said smilingly.

Donna stepped to the door with her. "You come back sometime?" she invited.

"Thanks. I don't think I'll be up in the hills much longer." Donna walked to her horse and swung into the saddle slowly.

Donna waved to her as she rode away and Donna replied with a wide swing of her quirt. Down the trail the roan trotted, eager to be back at the corral.

Donna laughed a tight little laugh as she thought back over the events of the afternoon. Some guiding hand must have held her when she was face to face with Stanley Black. He was just another cowboy who took his fun where he found it. No doubt he was amusing himself at the expense of little Rosa's innocence, playing the handsome caballero but ready to ride away when he got ready.

The roan increased his pace and broke out into the clearing above the camp. Donna resolved that she would play the game and go through with her bargain. She would drive down to Sam Dean's and marry Dudley.

It was at the corral when she rode up. Dudley tried to look as though he had been waiting a long time for her but Malloy spoiled this by calling to him. "I just tilted the saddle off your backskin. I want to ride again this evening let me know and I'll run in another horse. Horses that come in after four are turned out to graze." The tall corral boss grinned wickedly as he spoke.

Dudley did not reply to this but faced Donna. "Looks as though we both overstay a little."

Donna smiled sweetly. "You'll have to improve, Dud, or I'll take up golf."

He grinned in relief. "I have a real excuse but I was afraid it would sound phoney. I made a lot of headway to-day."

"I'm glad you did but I'm afraid you'll have to give up your prowling in the hills and play domestic for a while."

They mounted the steps to the main building and Donna crossed to her father's room. Asper was sitting up and greeted her with a smile that held much of his old vigor.

"Just as I expected! You two would desert an old man."

"We'll make up for it by pestering you all day to-morrow," Donna promised.

MOONLIGHT, a picturesque mountain camp, a pretty girl and a dashing cowboy. With such romantic elements of course there's a love story in "Call of the West" by R. G. Montgomery. There's adventure and excitement too in this thrilling new serial.

She went to her room and began to get ready for the trip to Dean's. Dudley was busy in his room. The door was open and she could hear him splashing and spluttering as he washed up.

Donna delayed as long as possible in her room and when she came out Dudley greeted her with a grin. He struck a grim pose. "Young lady, it is almost five o'clock. Just for that you will wait and have dinner here with me!"

Donna agreed readily enough. She had suddenly discovered that she was hungry. They walked over to the dining cabin and entered.

A crowd of timber men were eating noisily. The table woman led them to a small table aside from the main crowd and they sat down. The noisy banter of the men died at their arrival.

"I wonder if Dad will be able to travel to-morrow?" Donna spoke almost to herself.

"What's your hurry?" Dudley countered. "I'm getting on fine with my sleuthing and it would be a shame to keep me from showing up this bunch of roughnecks."

"I'm afraid something will happen to upset him, Dad. He's an old man and we have to think of him first." Donna was suddenly eager to be away from Folly Mountain.

Something had snapped the bond that held her. She would not have admitted that it was a cowboy's right-hand glove. She still believed Stanley Black would do as he said about Ball, but that did not seem to matter so much now.

"Well, in that light, I guess you win," Dudley grinned and began a healthy attack upon the steak.

The man who had charge of the company garage was leaving after having finished his meal. Donna beckoned him to the table. "Have my roadster at the main building in half an hour," she said. She accompanied the words with a smile.

The mechanic nodded and walked on. Donna's eyes met Dudley's and they both smiled.

EPIC RESCUE IN PICTURES.

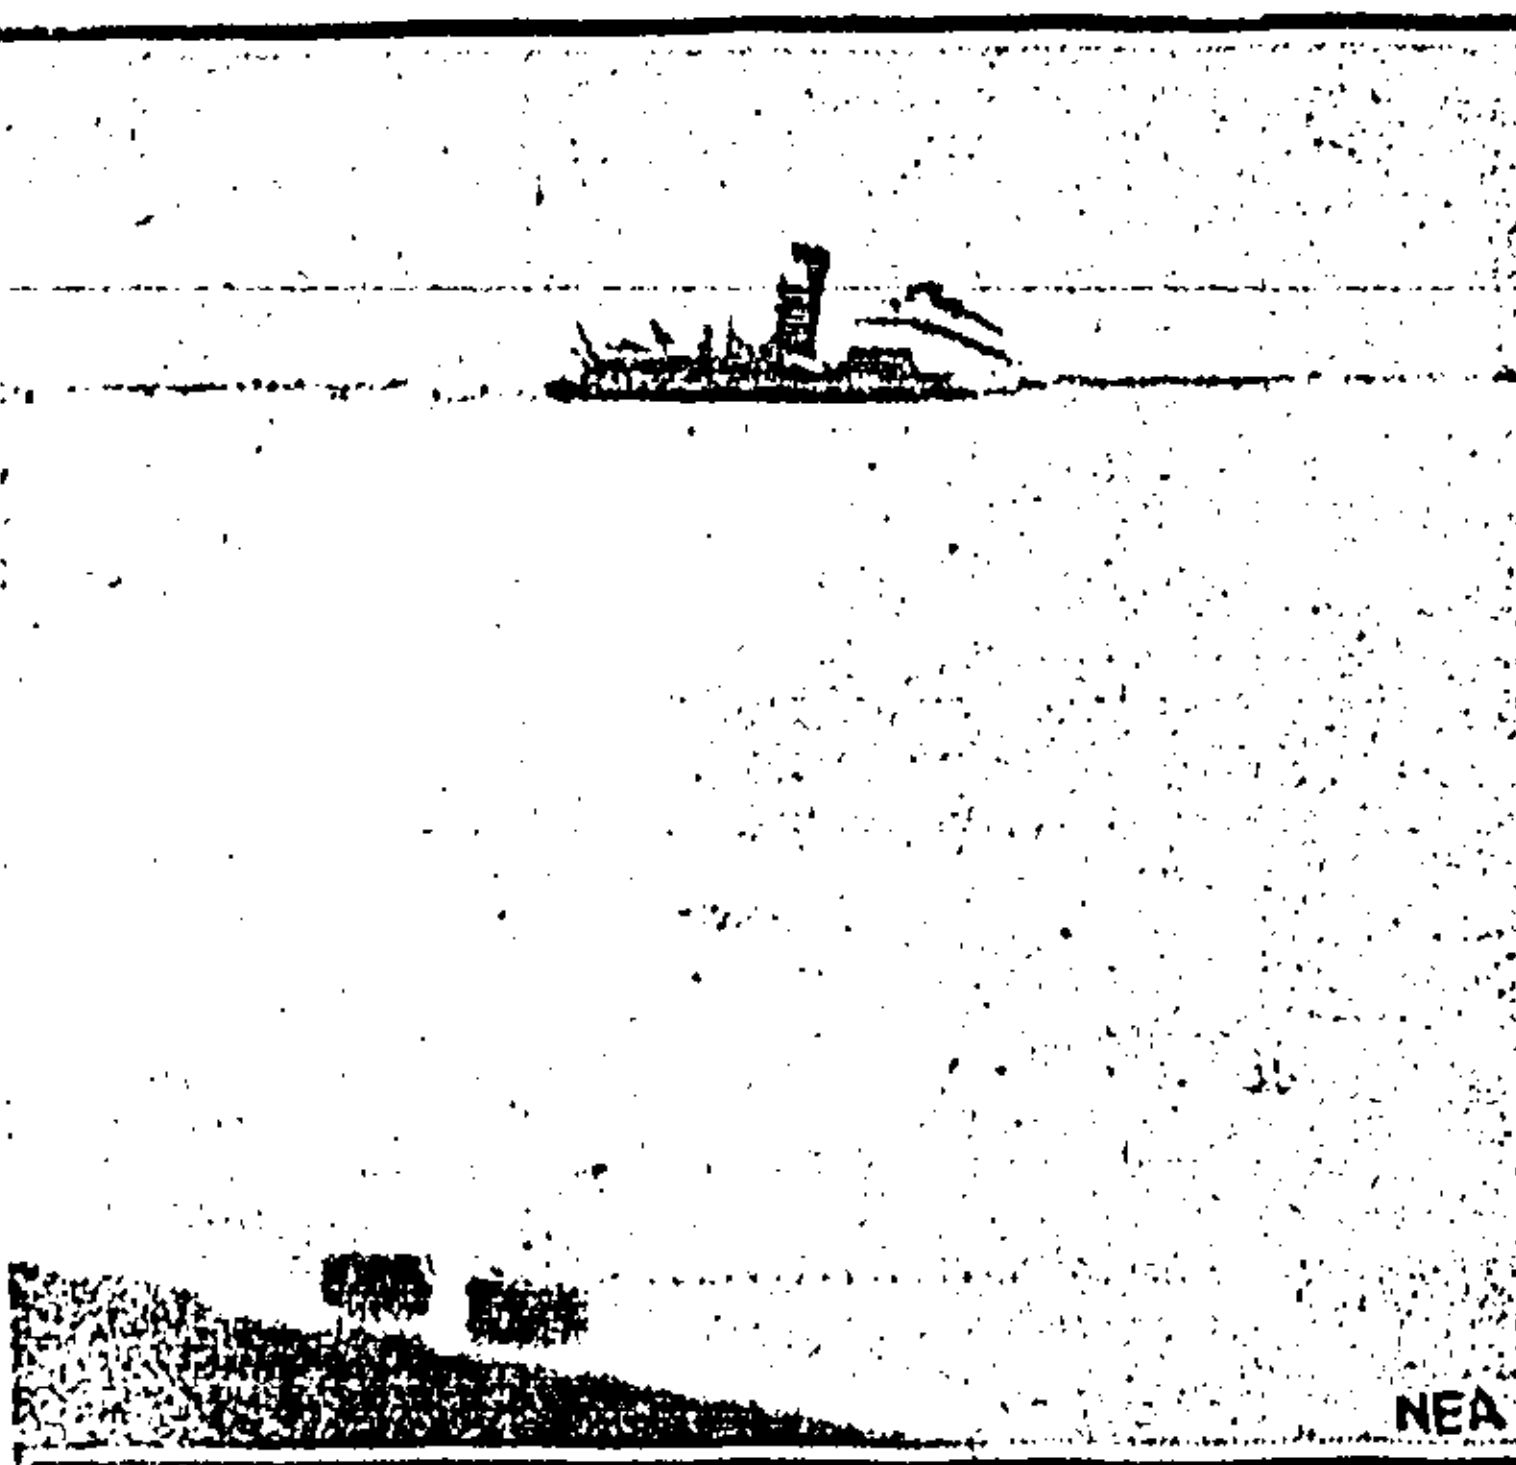

An epic of the seas was written when three men were rescued from the wreck of the Freighter Nevada, when the American Mail liner President Madison, returned to Seattle Oct. 5. The three men rescued were all who remained of the Nevada's crew of 37. They were taken from the rocky shores of Amatignak Island, Middle Aleutian, when a lifeboat from the President Madison braved heavy seas to go to their rescue. The three men rescued were James Thorsen, Lucena N. Decaney and Fritz Dowall. Photo shows rescuer and rescued left to right—Lucena N. Decaney, Captain R. J. Healy, master of the President Madison and James Thorsen.

Dennis Lawrence, above, a photographer from Passaic, N.J., is held in Harrisburg, Ill., for questioning by Jersey officials as a possible suspect in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping and murder. Lawrence, who denies any knowledge of the crime, was arrested after Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh forwarded to Illinois authorities an anonymous letter that named Lawrence.

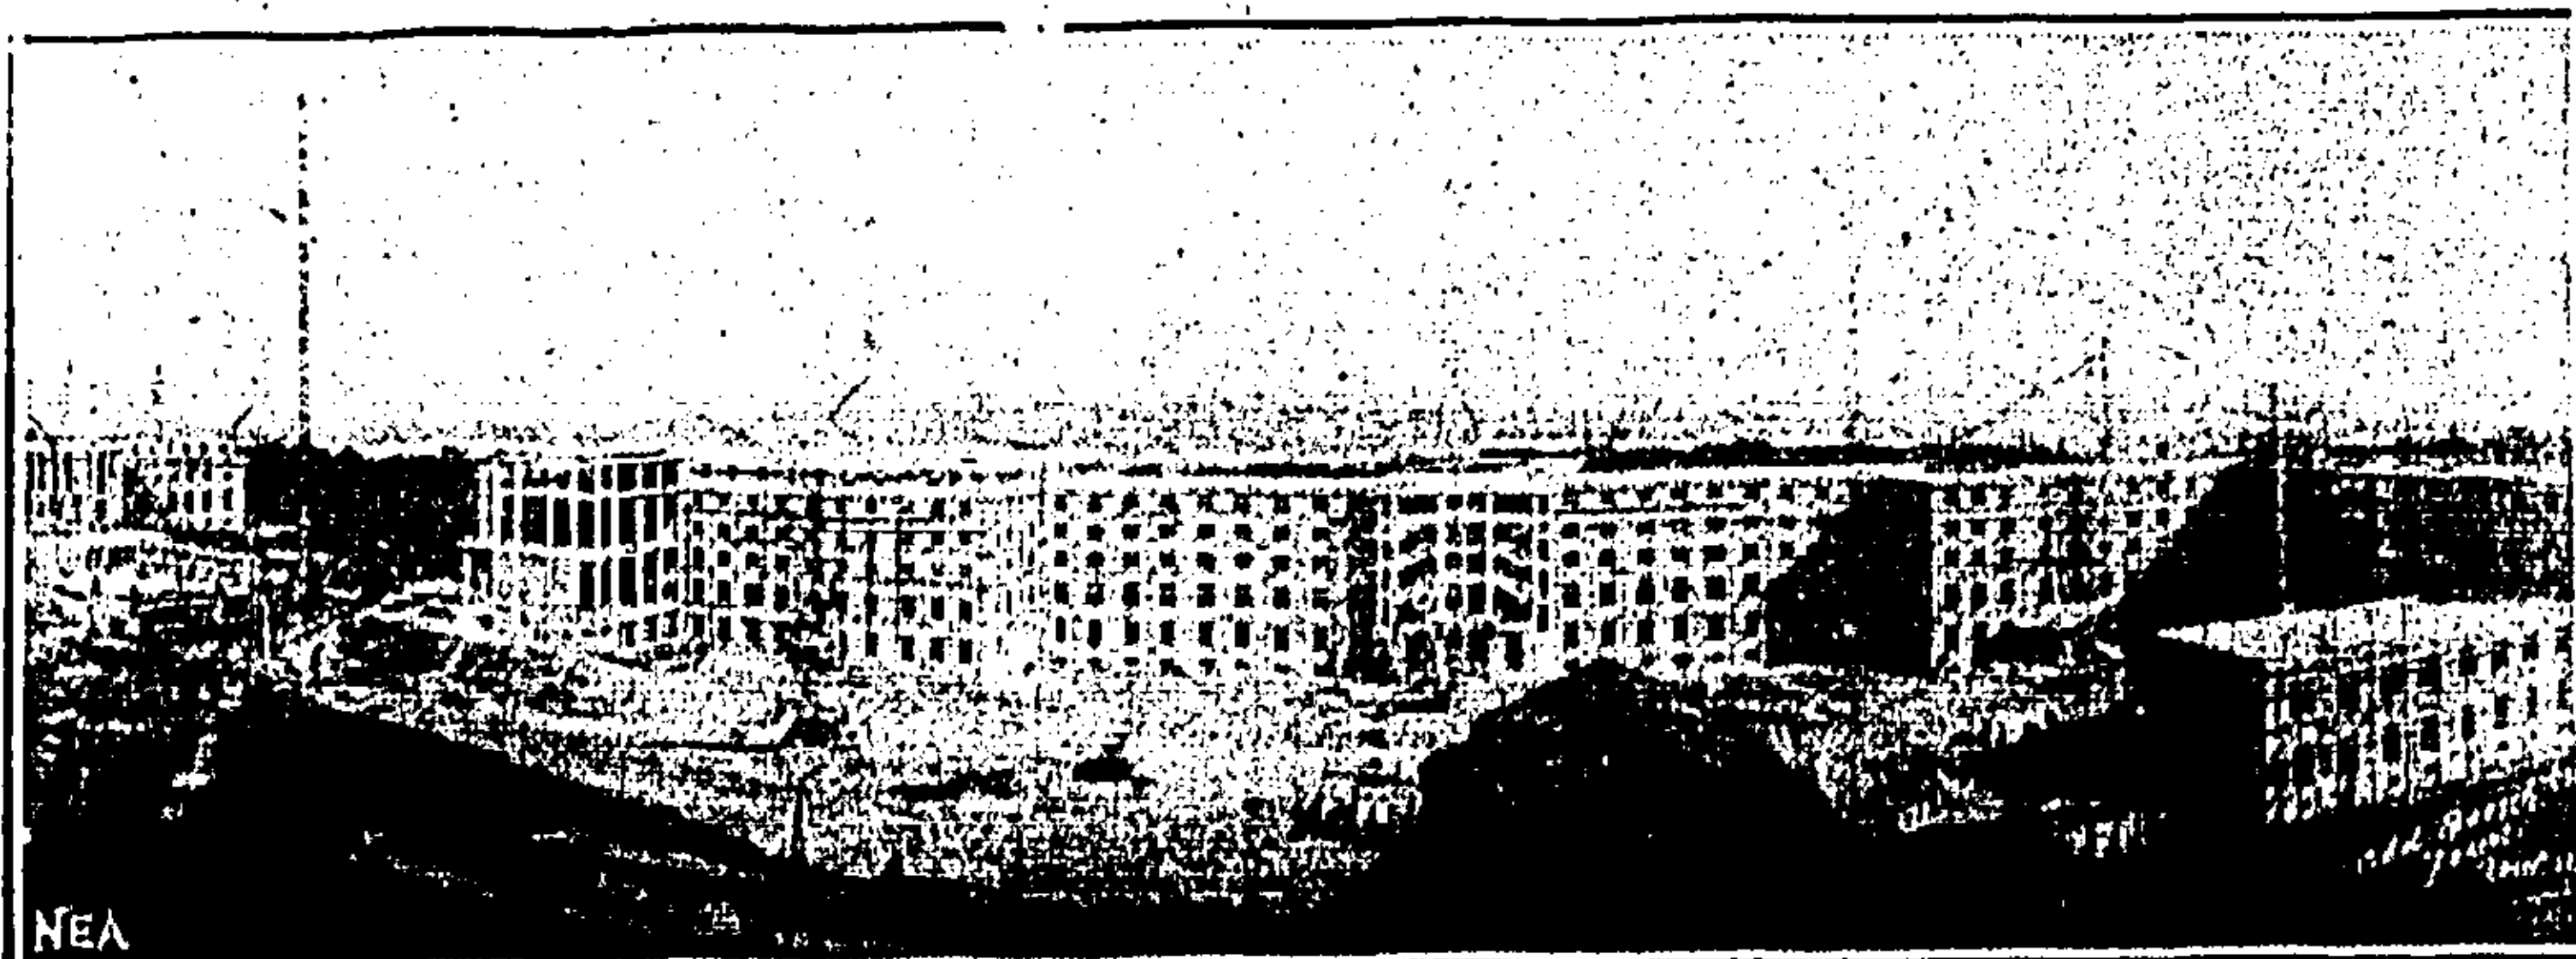

The rescue was made possible only when Eddie Blomberg, able seaman of the Madison crew, volunteered to swim ashore with a rope around his waist. Photo shows members of the lifeboat crew from the President Madison who went to the rescue of the three men. Third Officer E. J. Stull, who commanded the boat, is seen standing in uniform. Eddie Blomberg, the man who swam ashore with the line is indicated by arrow.

Above is a view of the Nevada breaking up on the rocky shore of Amatignak Island, after being holed.

As a result of the bitter quarrel between the pope and the Mexican government, the papal legate, Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz Flores, above, has been called to the United States.

Few people realize how extensive an undertaking the League of Nations is, even in the physical aspects of its plant. This picture shows the huge new office building of the League now under construction, overlooking the Lake of Geneva.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

It's a most important season for accessories, and here are sketched some of the newest ideas in ornaments for night and daytime wear. At upper right is the Vionnet trio of bracelets, oval-shaped and in translucent crystal of assorted shades. The bag, also for daytime wear, is shaped like the paper boats we used to make in our childhood. It is of plaited brown wool, and is very roomy. The belt is of brown suede, with brass studding. For evening wear there is another trio of bracelets (lower left), but these are of glittering rhinestones. The evening bag, by Patou, is made of black crepe. Its big jewelled clip can be removed very quickly to ornament a hat or frock.

ANGULAR DESIGNS.

Women Should Tilt Their Hats.

The Englishwoman of 1932 is having as important an influence on the millinery of her period as her Edwardian mother and Victorian grandmother had on theirs. And while they were unconsciously responsible for the elegant curves and sweeping lines of their hats, the woman of to-day is tending to favour for her millinery the geometrical lines and angles she prefers in clothes and furniture. These new hats definitely express the modern girl and finally contradict the notion that Englishwomen should stick to softening curves.

Clean-cut type

"In my opinion the average Englishwoman should wear even harder lines than the Frenchwoman," I was told by Madelon Chaumet of Berkeley-street, W., who designed these models. "The typical Englishwoman to-day is not the fluffy-haired person of twenty-five years ago. She is the elegant type who wears tailored clothes to perfection and never looks so well as when her hair is dressed to show her head."

"She tends to angles herself, so she should wear hard lines which, paradoxically, tend immediately to soften her angles," went on the designer.

"But she should wear her hats at a sideways tilt. Nothing over her nose will suit her unless it is a little to the side of her head as well."

The new geometrical hats are a combination of skilfully combined

LATEST COLOURS.

The new geranium colour is responsible for some of the prettiest dresses seen this season. Colour combinations in evening modes show the attraction that geranium red has for us. Marine and geranium is one of the best colour schemes. Again for day wear we have geranium, and one of its colour companions is elephant-grey. Then there is beige and navy-blue and hyacinth-blue, red-rose, poppy-red, yellow, and sand-rose. Apple-green, corse, and the colour known as brass continue to be considered as the smartest of the smart.

Often several colours are blended together with the most pleasing results. An excellent example consists of a deep wine-coloured skirt worn with an apricot blouse, which is topped with a brilliant red coat. Deep wine and all shades of green, red, and yellow, are used with a certain amount of navy, yellow, and white.

COLOUR SCARVES.

The newest scarves are worn loosely knotted round the throat, with the top end giving a wide tie effect. Crepe-de-Chine is the material used for these "ties" scarves, which have a neutral coloured background and three different colours decorating the wide front.

anoles. Felt is the favourite medium, sometimes in two shades, but velvet worked in chenille to look Persian lamb is used for afternoon hats.—V.C. in Exchange.

THE SUIT.

Essential to All Smart Wardrobes.

Most noticeable features of Paris styles this season are the turning of daytime clothes to the evening and the new epoch of informality in the evening. The leading French fashions of the season come under these headings. To the girl with a budget in distress they are like an answer to prayer.

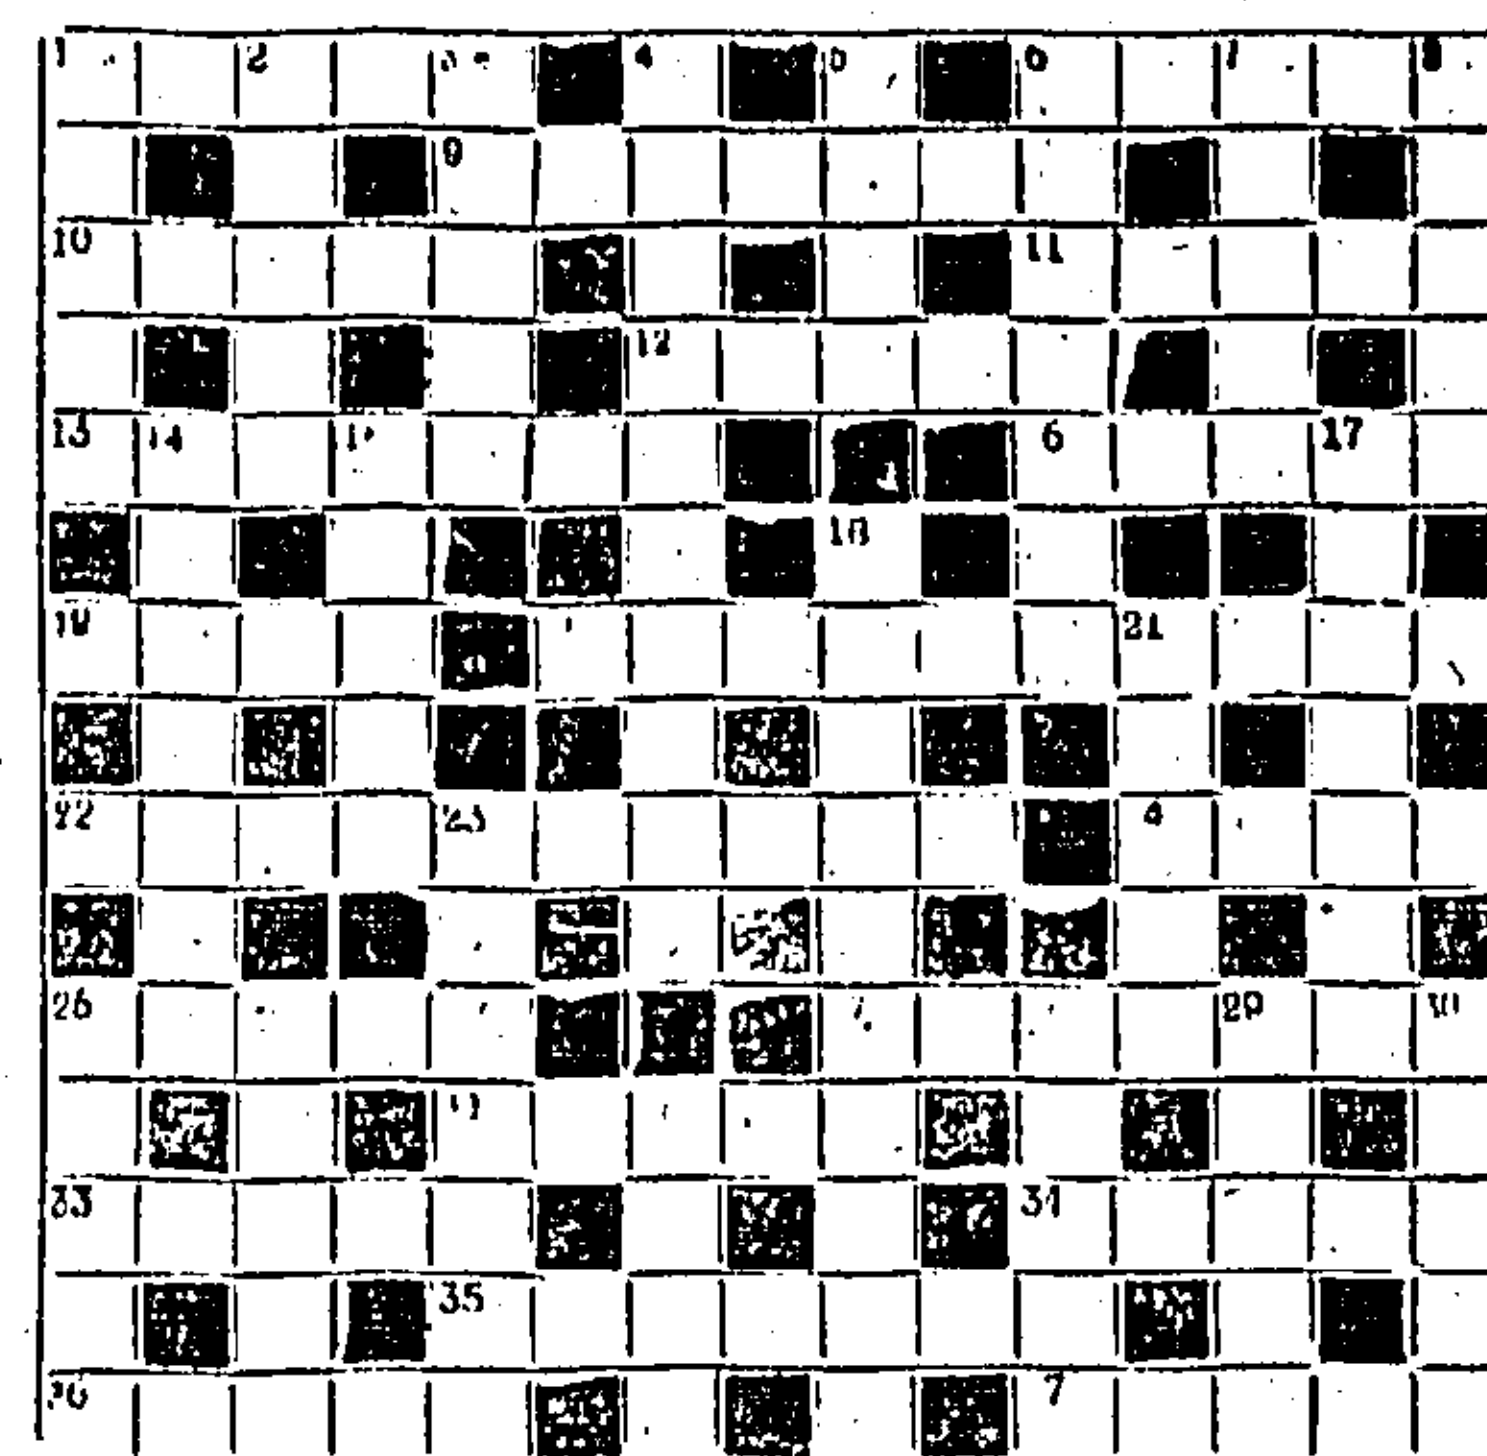

The one essential to all smart daytime wardrobes this season is the suit, and this can be divided into two classes—the suit that has a blouse and skirt and the suit that has a dress under its jacket. The first is a better choice for the girl who has to watch her step among the styles. With a blouse variation, a suit can do the work of two outfits, and particularly this season where the simple suit is good for both town and country wear.

Variation can be achieved with the dress-and-jacket suit by changes of hats, and lots of Parisiennes are successfully working this prestidigitator racket. A scarf and hat of poppy red, and another in white, will do a lot for this kind of ensemble in giving it freshness and variety.

Very new and sophisticated are the streamline frocks guileless of belt, which are in-curved from under-arm seams to hips. The jacket or the short cape is the current wrap for these ensembles.

Cotton velvet coats in bright colours are being worn over dark or bright coloured dresses. For instance, a bright red tailored maroon frock with a cotton velvet coat of the same colour looks chic.

HOPES ON GENEVA

After so many past disappointments, it would be quite understandable if there should still be a lingering doubt regarding the probability of this week's meeting of the Bureau of the Disarmament Conference resulting in the achieving of tangible results. Yet, even making allowances for doubt based on the immensity of the problem and the difficulties of adjusting the varying viewpoints, there does seem ground for thinking that a really worthwhile effort is to be made to get down to essentials. The new French plan which would appear to make a definite advance on previous attitudes, and the clear-cut statement of British policy outlined by Sir John Simon a few days ago, contain the promise of better things, while Mr. Baldwin's dramatic analysis of the possibilities of future wars, unless the aerial issue is seriously faced, would appear to betoken a closer approach to the realities of the whole situation.

One factor of immense importance is the clarifying of the British attitude on Germany's claim to equality. This claim is now definitely accepted in principle, and the consequence of Sir John Simon's outline of British policy is that it has served to modify any impression which may have existed in Berlin that Britain is unsympathetic towards Germany. Already, before the full implications have been disclosed, the British statement has been hailed as a marked advance on the attitude disclosed when the German claim was first put forward. At that time, the British declaration that Germany's raising of the equality issue was untimely created the impression that the German viewpoint was definitely opposed. The latest statement shows this suspicion to have been unfounded. Britain admits the contention that German disarmament was intended to be the prelude to general disarmament, but it also takes note of the practical aspects of the question. It is quite clear that there cannot be an immediate scaling down of armaments by the other Powers to the limits imposed on Germany, but that does not mean that a start cannot be made. Action in this direction will have to be progressive, in well-defined stages, and it will therefore be the task of the Disarmament Conference to work out a practical scheme along these lines. The great point to be kept in mind is that no Disarmament Conference can countenance any scheme for equality which would involve the right of any Power to re-arm: such an outcome would be totally contrary to the whole spirit of the disarmament movement. If Germany will but enter the council chamber at Geneva in a mood signifying a willingness to face the realities and to work hand in hand with the other Powers in evolving a definite plan, then we have every reason to hope for practical results.

One of the most interesting and important features of Sir John Simon's latest declaration is that which relates to an undertaking by the European States that they will not attempt to resolve any present or future differences by resort to force. This is interpreted as going further than the Kellogg Pact, which precludes resort to war as an instrument of national policy. The difference arises from the use of the term "force" as contrasted with "war." We only need take the case of Japan's activities against China to realise the distinction. Japan has not been technically at war with China, but her use of force is beyond question. If the new proposal finds approval, and if the undertaking is entered into with a full recognition of all that it implies, a definite step forward in the preservation of European peace will be recorded. But such promises will be of small avail unless they are reinforced by a determined public opinion. In the last resort, it is on this point that all efforts to abolish war must depend for their effectiveness. For unless the will to peace permeates the people of Europe, or any other part of the world for that matter, even the most solemn undertakings will always be in danger of being considered mere scraps of paper. It is for the Disarmament Conference to interpret and reinforce the desire of the peace-lovers of the world. If it fails, the future outlook will indeed be dark and gloomy.

Speech Days

It is difficult to determine who is more deserving of sympathy, the notable personage called upon to address an assembled school on Speech Day, or the totally insignificant person on the hard bench, forced by circumstances over which he has no control to simulate a reasonably intelligent interest in the proceedings. On the whole, the notable personage has the worst of the ordeal, especially if he is sensitive. Many an accomplished orator would immeasurably prefer to face an angry House of Commons, or a turbulent sea of undergraduates than the Sphinx-like scrutiny of a few hundred schoolboys or schoolgirls behaving with impeccable propriety. They may be bored to death, but they are far too polite ever to indulge a yawn. Usually tongue-tied themselves, they may be elated by the mellifluousness of the speaker's diction, and almost carried away by the fervour of his message, but they suppress their emotions with an almost superhuman stoicism. The cheers, when they come, are models of decorous approbation, as delicately timed as the cheers of the villagers in a musical comedy when the old Squire says his little piece. The "big noise" on a school Speech Day would often give a good deal to know what his young audience really think about him and his carefully prepared address. He can be fairly certain of two things. If the applause is infrequent and the cheering subdued, he is not likely to be criticised for serving up the well-worn platitudes of tradition. Schoolboys are conservative: they like what is old and well-tried, especially in attempts at pleasantry. And in any event the distinguished visitor can bet his bottom shilling that, whatever he says, he and not his speech will be remembered, in after days, by young Jokes or Robinson.

DAY BY DAY

THERE ARE MANY WHO MARRY FROM UTTER INDIGENCE OF THOUGHT, CAPTIVATED BY THE PLAYFULNESS OF YOUTH, AS IF THE KITTEN WERE NEVER TO BECOME A CAT.—W. S. Lander.

The lady's handbag which was found in Tait's Carnival Show on Sunday evening has since been claimed by Miss Luba Bumann of Sanson Road.

The body of an unknown Chinese, apparently that of a mendicant, was yesterday found by Sergeant Butler suspended from a tree by a piece of cloth tied round the neck. The body was found about 200 yards off Customs Path.

NEW START IN LIFEDIARY OF DESPAIR

So many offers of help and promises of money for Thirza Giblett, the young woman of 27 whose pathetic Diary of Despair was revealed in court at Bristol have been received by the police that she has been given a new start in life.

This announcement was made in Bristol Police Court when she was again charged, on remand, with wandering.

She was bound over for 12 months on condition that she stayed with the Salvation Army until something was done for her. The Bench said that probably the Salvation Army would find her a situation.

A New Start Assured.
At the outset Supt. Baker told the Court that there was nothing recorded against the woman from the police point of view.

Thanking the Press for the assistance they had given in the case, Supt. Baker said he had received letters from all parts of the country. Money had also been sent, and the police would now be able to help the girl; in fact, the help given by the Press would go a long way towards putting her on her feet again.

The Superintendent added that one old-age pensioner, who signed himself "Nearer 80 than 70," had sent 2s.

The Chairman (Mr. T. C. Lewis) Jolly good!

Supt. Baker added that the Salvation Army were ready to do all they could to help the woman.

The Diary of Despair.
The chairman thanked those who had sent money and had offered assistance.

"In the midst of your adversity," he told her, "there have been lots of kind friends about who are anxious to assist you. We hope you appreciate it, and we hope that in the future you will go on quite well."

The magistrates, added the chairman, were very sorry for her and the position in which she found herself.

Giblett's diary, which was produced in court was entitled "My Experiences in Bristol Looking for Work." One passage read at the last hearing stated that she had been up to the Suspension Bridge with the intention of "going over," but she had "lost her nerve."

Another entry paid tribute to a good Samaritan who had assisted her by giving her money for food.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN ROMEO

BY HERBERT FARJEON

NOT long ago I came across a leaderette in which the writer, after reminding his public of the fact that there is health of the mind as well as of the body, declared that art is the medicine we take to alleviate our complicated psychological and emotional troubles.

This is unquestionably true. Just as glycerine lozenges may be good for a sore throat, so "Romeo and Juliet" may be good for a sore heart. To join an amateur dramatic society may well be the remedy for the attack of blues.

One day, when this is fully realised by the medical fraternity, doctors may prescribe plays and players as they now prescribe physics and ointments, telling us that a little "Evening" taken before going to bed, should work wonders, or that a good course of Ralph Lynn should bring the desired relief.

And it may then be regarded as astonishing that in the bad old unenlightened days patients trusted entirely in their own judgment in the choice of shows.

The doctor of the future may, however, go even further than this.

Join the Society.

He may insist not merely that we shall go to see certain plays, but that we shall join our local amateur theatrical society and become actors and actresses ourselves.

If we are suffering because we are thwarted in our desire to be heroic, or in our desire to be apologetic, how much more satisfactory to play the part of Henry the Fifth or of Lady Snerwell ourselves than to get professionals to do it for us!

There are, of course, many good reasons why we depend so heavily on the services of professional players. For one, they save us time. For another, they are so much more accomplished at the job than we should be.

And then again, although we may be as vain as the vainest actor-manager in the history of the theatre, does not this very vanity inspire most of us with an uneasy feeling (so often mistaken for modesty) that we may possibly, if we appear in public, merely make fools of ourselves?

Nevertheless, we all want to act. It is a primitive instinct. And though the self-consciousness begotten of civilisation may hold many of us back, the strength of this primitive instinct may be glimpsed to-day in the enormous number of amateur actors all over the country, who are now for gathering in the suburbs of our cities and in the heart of our villages, to make up their minds what they shall act this autumn and who shall undertake the various parts.

What shall we act? That is the question. And too often the answer to it is dictated by a mistaken modesty which leads the performers into attempting creaky comedies and incredible little sketches about burglars in draw-ing-rooms that would tax the technique of the most accomplished professional, and even so keep the public at bay.

What amateur theatrical societies generally fail to realise is that a play with no life or depth in it is much more difficult to present entertainingly than a play that is vital and pregnant in every syllable.

Poor plays, if they are to be converted into good entertainments, require the most practiced players.

But the better the play, the more safely it may be handed over to the tender mercies of the amateurs. "Hamlet" and "The Trojan Women" have so much to lose that they can lose much and still be numbered among the wealthy.

The time, however, may come when the preliminary committee meetings of amateur theatrical societies will be presided over by doctors or dental specialists, and when the plays now existing, being found unsuitable, will be replaced by others especially constructed for the needs of amateurs, and containing parts written expressly to suit the requirements of stock mental cases.

The performances I envisage will differ radically from those given by professional players, since in the amateur performances type-casting will be completely abandoned.

Filling the Parts.

Thus the doctor-producer, recognising that whereas the professional theatre exists for the audience, the amateur theatre exists for the actors, will probably see to it that the heroine, whose exquisite beauty all the other characters extol before she makes her appearance, is played by the ugliest lady in the cast.

The Samsonian parts he will no doubt hand over to weak little men suffering acutely from the physical inferiority complex.

Little children may be cast for the parts of adults, since they want to be grown-up, and adults for the parts of little children.

And perhaps the doctor-producer, having settled the requirements of his company and finding nothing on the market to anthem exactly, will write out a prescription—as "1 murderer, 3 mothers, 2 geniuses, 1 leader of society, 16 heroines"—and so, sending it round to the nearest author-chemist, have the play "made up."

LIFE OF SHAME.

By Edward Kelly, White Slaver.

A screaming scandal threatens to rock England to the very bottom of its social foundation. It has been left to us, in far off Hongkong, to call attention to this blot upon our fair name.

A girl hippopotamus has been shipped from Africa and landed at the London Zoo as a mate for the male hippopotamus already there.

What foul means were used to lure the innocent victim to this life of shame? Perhaps we shall never know. The white slavers do their vile work craftily and secretly, which is a bit annoying, because we'd like to know how it's done.

Probably she was lured to Europe with the promise of a great stage career awaiting her at a circus—and what does she find. She finds herself thrust into a sordid Zoo with the harsh words echoing in her ears, "If you want hay, you've got to earn it!"

Friendless and alone she appeals to the male hippopotamus. The inevitable happens. She falls.

And once a hippopotamus falls, it takes a block and tackle to get her up again!

The downward path opens before her . . . Drink . . . drugs.

Either that or she becomes hardened and starts a zoo of her own, and gets covered with diamonds and is called "Ma." But of what use is her gold and finery. Other hippopotamuses nudge each other when she passes.

Respectable lady hippopotamuses who have realised that a woman's place is in the jungle, and have reared families, wave their back leg scornfully when they see her, and then go home and sit in the kitchen and gossip.

Her tawdry life is but an empty shell, and she dies surrounded by diamonds and empty champagne bottles—alone—all the respectable hippopotamuses having died long before.

Shall this sort of thing be allowed to go on unchecked by the authorities and uncommented on by "Pro Bon Publico" and "Father of Seven?"

No! No! No!

SNOWDEN'S CAUSTIC GOOD-BYE

BITTER ATTACK ON TARIFFS

LETTER TO PRIME MINISTER

Lord Snowden's letter of resignation from the Cabinet was in the following terms:—
Dear Prime Minister, I wrote to you on August 29 after the Cabinet meeting of August 27th, at which the Ottawa Agreement was received and considered, forming you of my decision to withdraw from the Government. Your reply, and your subsequent letters and our conversation, have not altered my decision, so I now ask you formally to submit to His Majesty my resignation of the office I have had the honour to hold.

I need not say that I regret to be compelled to take this action, for it severs our 40 years' close political association and co-operation in work which has transformed the party features of British politics. But I can no longer, without loss of all self-respect, remain a member of a Government which in pursuing a policy which I believe is disastrous to the welfare of the country, which will lead to the disruption of the Empire, and which is fraught with great danger to our international relations.

"Your Assurance."

I am well aware of and have given due consideration to, the reasons which are being urged against any action which might weaken the unity of the National Government and lessen its influence and prestige in the world. I took my part in forming the National Government when our colleagues in the Labour Government ran away from a necessary task which they feared would involve a disagreeable unpopularity. Like you, I sacrificed the associations of a political lifetime for what I still believe was an imperative duty in a time of grave national crisis. I helped to the best of my powers to secure the unprecedented national victory at the polls last autumn.

I did this on your assurance, and that of Mr. Baldwin, that a National Government, reinforced by a popular mandate, would work only in the national interests, and would not be used for party purposes and policy. I accepted the declaration in which you said:—
"So far as I am personally concerned, I am not going to be run by any party. . . . It may be that the Conservatives might try to put something over us. I am not their man."

I accepted these assurances in good faith. I am still prepared to support a National Government which adheres to those conditions. "Tories Using You."

But for some time now, indeed from the formation of the second National Government, it has become increasingly clear that the Protectionist section of the Government and the House of Commons were determined to carry through a full Protectionist policy, using you, and using us, if we remain in the Government, as instruments for carrying through that policy.

The conditions have changed since August and November of last year. The main purpose for which the National Government was formed has been achieved. In a statement issued by you on August 24 last year you said:—
"The specific purpose for which the new Government is being formed is to deal with the national emergency, which now exists. It will not be a Coalition Government in the usual sense of that term, but a Government of co-operation for this one purpose. When that purpose is achieved the political parties will resume their respective positions."

Tariff Excuse.

It is worth while to remind you of a fact which is not generally appreciated. When the Conservatives first joined the National Government the question of tariffs was never raised. It was never suggested, except by the leader of the Labour Party, that tariffs might be necessary to deal with the national emergency.

Lord Halsbury, who was not a member of the first National Government, was, I believe, the first to raise the tariff question.

On Sept. 3, 1931, he called upon the Government to hurry on with its one purpose of balancing the Budget, and then have a General Election on the Conservative programme of tariffs.

From that time on the Tory demand for a General Election became increasingly clamant. We could not eventually resist it. We had innumerable discussions to find an agreed formula on the subject of tariffs. Somebody discovered that we had for the first time an "adverse balance of trade," and this was seized upon as an excuse for making an examination of tariffs as a means of dealing with it.

Rushed Into Tariffs.

But neither you nor Mr. Baldwin during the election went further than to commit yourselves and the Government to

"An examination by the National Government of the policy of tariffs with an open mind and without hampering pledges, and to put it into force if it was found to be the best means of restoring a favourable balance of trade."

No such impartial examination ever took place. We were rushed into the imposition of unprecedented temporary duties to deal with "abnormal" importations; and then, before the results were determined, the insatiable appetite of the Protectionists produced the permanent tariff scheme for general Protection.

They set up a Tariff Committee, which seems to regard its functions to be to grant tariffs to practically every selfish interest which asks for them without any adequate examination of the need or consequences.

Effect of Tariffs.

On this issue the Free Trade members of the Cabinet in January offered their resignations. On strong pressure from you and the Conservative members we reluctantly accepted the compromise of the "agreement to differ."

The circumstances then were different from what they are today. The Budget had been balanced on paper, but it remained to be seen what the actual result would be at the end of the financial year. The out-turn proved the soundness of the balancing. The position of sterling was at that time uncertain. Neither of these reasons for maintaining the compromise of last January any longer exists.

Moreover, six months' experience of the working of tariffs has disillusioned every unprejudiced Protectionist. None of the blessings which were to fall upon and fructify the sterile industrial soil have descended.

Our foreign trade has considerably declined; unemployment has greatly increased; the policy has led to more foreign reprisals and restriction. Our foreign trade has considerably declined; unemployment has greatly increased; the policy has led to more foreign reprisals and restriction.

They have come back, after weeks of acrimonious disputes and aoid struggles with vested interests, with agreements wrenched from them to avert a collapse of the Conference and an exposure to the world of the hollowness of the talk of Imperial sentiment in economic affairs.

This is not the occasion to discuss the Ottawa agreement in detail. There will be plenty of opportunity to do that when the public of this country have been put in possession of the true facts.

Nothing in my political experience has been more disgraceful and dishonest than the misrepresentations of the results of the Conference which are being circulated through the Tory Press. The British delegates have come back with agreements to maintain existing tariffs, to increase existing duties on food imports, to impose a duty on wheat, and to raise the price of meat and bacon by restricting foreign imports. These agreements deprive us to a great extent of the use of our tariff as a bargaining weapon.

Lower Than a Dominion.

The Dominions are to have a free market here while retaining their protective, and often prohibitive, duties against British trade. We have undertaken to denounce some of our trade agreements with foreign countries. The Dominions are to dictate to us where we shall buy and where we shall not buy.

The agreements have surrendered our fiscal autonomy, and handed over to the Dominions the controls of British trade policy, reducing this country below the status of a Dominion.

You cannot expect Free Traders to acquiesce, even passively, in such a policy of national humiliation and bondage. The "agreement to differ" cannot meet such a situation. That agreement has always been a lie.

It has placed Free Traders in

It is not the Free Traders but the Tories who have broken the unity of the National Government by forcing their own policy, for which they had no mandate.

The Tories exact us to do all the sacrificing, while they sacrifice nothing but use the majority we helped to give them to serve their party policy.

If any unfortunate results should follow the break-up of the National Government, and its transformation into a Tory Government, it is the Tories, and those who support them, who must bear the responsibility.

LOCAL COMPETITIONS.

In order to promote further interest in the activities of the Hongkong Fencing Club a special cup has been presented by Capt. R. L. Burnett, R.N., President of the Club, for competition among members, while the Hon. Mr. E. R. Hallifax and Mrs. Hallifax have presented a cup for lady members.

The little known art of fencing is being very much revived in England, apart from any other reason, for promoting rapid thought and physical action, while in Hongkong there are quite a few exponents who meet at the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club every week.

On Saturday last the club gave an exhibition at the Open Cruise of the Yacht Club and the guests and members showed extensive interest. The Fencing Club welcomes those who have a real desire to take an active interest. There is an elementary standard of instruction given by an honorary physical training instructor, and a more advanced standard of fencing with the more subtle experts of sword play is given by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. F. J. T. Locke.

Members have been circulated regarding the two cups which have been presented, as follows.

THE BURNETT CUP.

The President of the Club, Captain R. L. Burnett, R.N., is generously presenting a Trophy in the form of a Cup to be fought for annually by all the Members. It is his desire in making this very helpful gesture to promote a more active interest in sword play whilst giving the beginner a sound chance of success. Captain Burnett proposes therefore that the Cup shall be won by the Member making the most progress during the season. A small cup as a supporter will go with the Trophy the latter being held by the winner for twelve months. It is hoped to present this Cup at the closing Cruise of the Yacht Club some time in April and Captain Burnett will present this Cup on the advice of the hon. secretary.

THE HALLIFAX CUP.

The Fencing Club is also extremely indebted to The Hon. Mr. E. R. and Mrs. Hallifax for presenting a Cup to be won outright by the Lady member exhibiting the more finished style in conjunction with fighting ability. The details of this award will be discussed by the Committee.

Tories are carrying through more dangerous in their permanent effects than the crisis of last year, which was temporary, and quickly yielded to drastic treatment.

If I were to yield now, I should be yielding not only on this issue but all along the line, and should be incalculably committed to the support of the whole future policy of this Government.

While it is a great responsibility to advise the public at large to see any certain picture, because tastes are so different, we do not hesitate to do so in the case of "The Doomed Battalion." It is more than a picture. It is an experience. It is not just a matter of taste; it is too big, too grand to miss satisfying all tastes. It has been described as "The picture terrific." Though this may sound extravagant, we know of no better way to describe it. If you care to see the new idea in picture making, if you love the dramatic, if you thrill at the idea of something totally new and different, if you want a complete change of scene and atmosphere, you will make it a special point to see "The Doomed Battalion." Incidentally it will be your first chance to see those two new stars of the screen, the exquisite Tala Birell and the great Luis Trenker.

MEDWAY LOSE SECOND LEAGUE POINT

BATTERY HOLD
WEAK TEAM

"NAP" AGAINST
R.E.s

(By "Bully Off")

A depleted side representing H.M.S. Medway did well to play the 24th Battery to a draw in the Mammak Tournament yesterday, and by so doing they maintained the team's unbeaten record in the competition.

The sailors fielded a weakened side on account of a number of their players being away on patrol in Bina Bay, but they managed to hold the Army forwards well. The Medway were the first to score, netting their only goal in the first half, but after the interval the Battery equalised.

DECISIVE VICTORY.

The H.K.S. Battery gained a decisive victory over the Royal Engineers by five goals to nil at Sookumpoo yesterday. They were faster and their movements and stick-work were far superior. The Battery backs played remarkably well and as a result the Engineers were seldom able to penetrate the defence. At the interval the Battery led by three goals to nil and after the re-start added two more. For the winners Khudda Bux found the net twice and Lieut. Macfarlane, Bakhtawar Singh, and Gajjan Singh once each.

FRIENDLY.

A fast game with each side having a fair share of the exchanges was the result of the friendly meeting between H.M.S. Osiris and H.M.S. Proteus at King's Park yesterday. The Osiris forwards combined more effectively and made the most of their opportunities in front of goal. At the interval they had established a lead of three clear goals, and in the second half added one more the Proteus replying with two goals.

WATER POLO.

Two water polo matches were played in the Y.M.C.A. bath yesterday. After a fast game the Y.M.C.A. defeated a team from the Medway eight goals to one. Schröder netted seven times for the "Y." Team from H.M.S. Kent and H.M.S. Bruce met later in the evening. The Kent men scored the only two goals of the match.

How Pataudi Scored His First Century on Australian Soil

TWO "LIVES" IN AN INNINGS OF BRILLIANT DRIVING

The Nawab of Pataudi's brilliant century in his first match on Australian soil was the outstanding feature of the match between the M.C.C. and Western Australia last month. The first day's play is described below:

The best exhibition of the day was that of the Nawab of Pataudi, who was eventually caught on the boundary. He gave one or two chances; but his innings was delightful to watch. He scored runs all round the wicket with an easy, graceful style. He thus joins the select band of Englishmen who have scored a century on a first appearance in Australia.

Sutcliffe played a chanceless, but cautious innings for 54, and Jardine batted brightly for 38. At one stage there were only three wickets down with 250 runs on the board; but a slump then set in, and wickets fell fast. Play ceased five minutes before the usual time an appeal against the light being upheld. The Western Australians batted keenly all day, few chances being missed. A feature was the exhibition of R. Bryant, the captain, at cover-point. Lovelock, behind the wickets, also gave a creditable exhibition. There was an attendance of about 4000.

The teams were—
England—D. R. Jardine (captain), R. E. S. Wyatt, the Nawab of Pataudi, H. Brown, H. Sutcliffe, M. Leyland, H. Larwood, L. Ames, T. B. Mitchell, H. Verity, W. E. Bowes, and E. Paynter (12th man).
Western Australia—R. Bryant (captain), H. Calder, P. Curtin, H. Drew, R. Halsecomb, W. Hill-Smith, M. Inverarity, C. Jarvis, O. Lovelock, E. Martin, B. O'Shaughnessy, and W. A. Evans (12th man).

THE PLAY.

Sutcliffe and Leyland opened the innings, Halsecomb bowling to Sutcliffe, who turned his second ball nicely to square-leg for a single. Halsecomb was bowling fast on the leg side. O'Shaughnessy, the other fast bowler, opened the other fast bowler, and played him with confidence, and the first four came when he covered him beautifully. Halsecomb was bowling well, keeping a good length and bumping him at times. He had Sutcliffe troubled, and once appealed for l.b.w. against him, but was unsuccessful. Inverarity placed O'Shaughnessy after he had bowled two overs, and in his first over Leyland sent a short one to square-leg for an excellent four. On the second ball of Inverarity's second over he tried to do the same, but was caught close in at square-leg by O'Shaughnessy. He had been batting half an hour, and had scored 15, including three fours. Sutcliffe was then eight, and the total was 25. Pataudi followed Leyland, and played a maiden from Halsecomb. Play became very dull, and O'Shaughnessy, who took the ball at Halsecomb's end, also had Sutcliffe troubled, the pitch at this end being troublesome. Pataudi started slowly, but was playing confidently, and glanced O'Shaughnessy twice for singles. At the end of an hour's play the score was one for 30, Sutcliffe being 16 and Pataudi three.

UNNECESSARY CAUTION

Play livened up considerably in the next quarter of an hour. Sutcliffe being more at home against the new bowlers, Curtin and Martin. Twenty runs came up in ten minutes. Sutcliffe doing most of the scoring, twice hitting Curtin for four. Pataudi, who was using his feet nicely to Martin, drove the slow bowler to leg several times. Generally, however, the batsmen were showing unnecessary caution as the bowling was only moderate. At the luncheon adjournment the score was 77, Sutcliffe being 40 and Pataudi 10.

O'Shaughnessy and Halsecomb opened after lunch, and off the first two balls of O'Shaughnessy's second over Pataudi scored four. The first was a beautifully-timed leg drive, and the second, a good square cut. At 55 Martin replaced O'Shaughnessy, and Pataudi drove the third ball to mid-on. (Continued on Page 9.)

COUNTY CRICKETER IN
LOCAL LEAGUE

BATTING AVERAGE OF 231.50

T. A. Pearce, the Kent cricketer, is making his first appearance in local cricket on Saturday, when he will turn out for the Hongkong Cricket Club against the Army in a First Division League match.

The son of "Tam" Pearce, who has been playing in Interport cricket for the past 30 years, "T.A." enjoyed the reputation whilst at Chatterhouse of being one of the finest schoolboy batsmen of his day.

When he later entered senior cricket, he made several successful appearances for Kent both in the first and second elevens.

This year he played four innings for the Kent 2nd XI, his average reading

BOXING AT THE Y.M.C.A.

FORMATION OF
PUPILS CLASS

ARMY INSTRUCTORS

In order to give members the opportunity of learning the art of self defence, and at the same time provide them with healthy recreation, the European Y.M.C.A. has inaugurated a boxing class, and last night members received their first instruction.

The class, which is open to members only, is being conducted by Capt. Elliot-Heywood, with the assistance of three South Wales Borderers instructors, Cpl. Evans, Private Roberts and Private Morli. Last night the class was held in the West Lounge, but it is hoped to instal a boxing ring in the Badminton court in the near future, which will remain a permanent structure.

No little interest was displayed yesterday in this new activity of the Y.M.C.A., and it is expected that the class will very quickly enlarge its membership.

Capt. Elliot-Heywood and his assistants intend to explain and teach the complete fundamentals of boxing, and the Y.M.C.A. owe them a debt of gratitude for coming forward and offering their services in this manner.

The next class will be held at 6.30 p.m. on Wednesday, and thereafter will meet every Wednesday evening.

PATAUDI'S FIRST CENTURY

for four, and brought up the hundred when he cover-drove the next ball for three, Bryant saving it on the boundary. The runs had taken 108 minutes, Sutcliffe was 43 and Pataudi 41.

Pataudi was now giving a brilliant exhibition, sending Halcombe down the gully and turning him to fine leg nicely. Sutcliffe brought up his 50 by pulling a loose one from Martin to leg for four. He had been 115 minutes at the wickets. Pataudi had a "life" when he went out to a ball from Martin, and was completely bent, but Lovelock, the wicket-keeper, failed to take the ball. Sutcliffe was out soon after when he also went out to one from Martin which curled right round the bats and Lovelock stumped him. Sutcliffe had been batting 121 minutes, and his 54 runs included four fours. Pataudi was 40 not out, and two were down for 118.

LOOSE BALLS HIT.

Wyatt followed, and played out the over. In the next over, Pataudi brought up his 50, made in 97 minutes.
The fielding was very keen, Bryant making some brilliant saves at cover-point. The batsmen were still playing cautiously, but they made no mistake when loose balls were sent up, and Wyatt hit Martin twice to the boundary from successive balls. Curtin replaced Martin at 146 and, bowling a good length, slackened the scoring rate. Pataudi was still playing all bowlers with the greatest ease.
He just seems to tap the ball, but it goes to the boundary with lightning speed. He brought up his 75 after 130 minutes. Pataudi again almost lost his wicket when Martin beat him with a slow break. Lovelock whipped off the ball, but the Indian was just inside his crease.

In the last over before afternoon tea, the seventh bowler, Drew, a slow-medium left-hander, sent down a mallet to Pataudi. At the adjournment, the score stood at two for 180, of which Pataudi had made 86 and Wyatt 22.

With the fourth ball after ten
Wyatt stepped in front to Martin, and was out lbw. He was batting 71 minutes for 22 runs.

Jardine was given a great ovation.
He opened brightly, and soon ran to double figures. He drove Halcombe straight down the field for four, and brought up to 200, made in 210 minutes. Pataudi was more careful as he approached his hundred, but with a beautiful cover-drive from Martin made his score 90, and brought up his century when he lifted a full from Inverarity to mid-on for four. He had taken 182 minutes.
He was given a great cheer.

Pataudi now opened his shoulders and attacked the bowling. O'Shaughnessy opened with the new ball at 235. When Pataudi was 119 he had another "life." He hesitated in running when called, and the ball was thrown to the bowler, O'Shaughnessy, who tried to throw down the wicket,
instead of knocking it, and missed, enabling Pataudi to scramble in.
Soon after Halcombe gained his reward for consistent effort when he beat Jardine and bowled him.

Three balls later Ames was out, without scoring, to similar ball which hit his middle stump. Five were down for 255. Brown did not last long, being caught by Calder off Curtin when trying to off-drive a good length ball. Six for 260.

PATAUDI DISMISSED.

Larwood, who followed Brown, opened brightly, and was missed off a hard chance at point by Inverarity when nine. With a beautiful side-off Martin he brought up 300 in 277 minutes, and in the same over Pataudi brought up his 150 by driving Martin for four. He had been in for 245 minutes. Pataudi's brillant innings came to an end when he was 166. He hit a full toss from Martin for six, and when attempting to do the same next ball was caught on the boundary by Jarvis.

In the next over Verity, who replaced Pataudi, stepped in front of a fast one from Halcombe and was out lbw. Mitchell followed, and was at sea, but managed to keep the wicket intact until five minutes before time, when an appeal against the light was upheld.

To jar for holding jam. While the stuff was boiling we discovered we hadn't one, so I dashed out to find the shops were shut, but I met a small boy who had been fishing for tiddies. He gave me the jar, but I had to pay twopence each for six tiddlers, which I consider is a swindle, and I'm going to write to the papers about it . . . 1s.

Anyway, we've got at least a shillingsworth of jam.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The glorious romance of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," as vivified in the Fox production featuring Marlon Nixon and Ralph Bellamy, is coming to the King's Theatre on Sunday. The choice of dainty, appealing Miss Nixon and tall, handsome Bellamy to enact the leading roles in this important picture drama, is said, a reward for splendid work in recent successes.

Miss Nixon, it will be recalled, scored individually opposite Charles Farrell in "After Tomorrow," then repeated her success in her brilliant performance with Warner Baxter in "Amateur Daddy." Bellamy, who until now has had the up-hill struggle of establishing himself in "unassuming" or "heavy" roles, was given the romantic part of Dr. Adam Ladd because of the capable manner in which he portrayed the German officer in "Surrender," his important character study of the Juvenile Court Judge in "Young American," and of the incorruptible police captain in "Disorderly Conduct."

Lavishness of production in both locale and settings is promised in the current version of the Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson masterpiece. It was filmed on a specially reconstructed Sunnybrook Farm, near Santa Cruz, California, with the reproduction of a New England blizzard in which the dramatic climax occurs.

Briefly, the film story recounts the main adventures of Rebecca, as immortalized in the book, revolving around her intense desire to win the regard of her spinster aunt; her interest in obtaining a wedding ring for the unwed mother of Jack-O-Lantern, and her romance with Dr. Adam Ladd. Mac Marsh, as Aunt June, and Louise Clower Hale, as Aunt Miranda, portray the aged spinster aunts of Rebecca.

Amusing Comedy at Queen's.

For sheer fun, few comedies of the current season excel the hilarity of "Cracked Nuts," now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

Based on a ludicrously funny situation, the picture carries its two stars, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, through an amazing series of comic and thrilling situations.

The story is laid in a mythical kingdom whose subjects are divided into two classes, the deposed kings and reigning executioners. Its most important moments are tombstones erected to the memories of deposed rulers.

Into this chaotic country come—Wheeler and Woolsey with the intention of usurping the vacant crown. They dodge executioners, stage thrilling battles with tanks and aeroplanes, hire executioners galore and finally come to the conclusion that Chicago is a tame spot in comparison.

The story is an original by that past master of comedy acting Douglas Siodman, in collaboration with Al Bensberg.

"Love Me To-night."

Hollywood put a horse under contract to toss Maurice Chevalier from his lead in "Love Me To-night," now showing at the King's Theatre. The sequence shows a hunt at a country estate. Maurice, in the role of a tailor impersonating a baron, and trying his darndest to impress aristocratic family, almost reveals his true identity by his bad riding.

His wit, however, saves the day after his spill from the horse, and soon Jeannette has yielded to his charms. But the secret of his identity comes out anyhow, and then it requires an amusing, but at the same

YOU GET WHAT YOU WANT—

If You Want It Badly Enough.

Most people want to be wealthy, but they don't want money so badly that they will work hard enough to get it. So they just remain poor, and envious of others. Many people yearn for abounding health and vigour, and yet they will not make that sustained effort which they know will give such wonderful returns in happiness.

To be well you must have the will to be well. If you are ailing, either seriously or slightly, no one can help you more than yourself. Take a firm resolve and carry it through. If you are run-down and weak don't wait until you are a confirmed invalid, but start on a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the old and tried blood and nerve tonic. And make up your mind to give them a thorough trial—not a half-hearted one. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enable the system to increase and enrich its blood supply, thereby bringing new strength to nerves and renewed energy to the faded tissues. For anaemia, (blood impoverishment) and its consequences; pallor, emaciation, weakness, neurasthenia, insomnia, digestive troubles, women's ailments, rheumatism and scintilla you need the new supplies of rich, pure blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can give you. Nothing else can be so surely relied upon.

time romantic climax, to a straightforward things up to everyone's satisfaction.

"The Happy Ending."

For the "Shirley" scenes of "The Happy Ending," the next attraction at the Queen's and Jan Hay's popular story, Millard Webb had the privilege of using a giant Cunarder.

Over four hundred extras took part in the scene, to enact a panic-stricken mob of passengers, clamouring to be saved from the sinking liner and filling to overflowing the boats.

The big thrill of the night was when one of the boats fouled its davits, and tilting at a terrific angle, threw its human cargo into the water. With remarkable good fortune, only four minor casualties occurred although there were some ugly moments. At one time a man, his leg caught in the rigging of the capsize boat, was pinned under water.

This scene is particularly thrilling in the film, being the highlight of an engrossingly human story of sacrifice.

"Night World."

The horrible monster who thrilled and horrified the World in "Frankenstein" is back on the screen. But this time it is without the spectacular makeup that Boris Karloff captures audiences at the Central Theatre in "Night World," a Universal production. He plays the part of "Frankenstein," a Calvary proprietor, and MacDonald in his usual polished manner. "Night World" stars Lew Ayres and Mae Clarke and is different to the kind of screen entertainment we have been having here for sometime.

"Travelling Husbands"

The worry of thousands of grass widows whose travelling husbands flood railways and hotels of the world in quest of the big orders, finds its answer in "Travelling Husbands," which commences at the Central Theatre to-morrow. Nor does it stop at telling where he is, but shows what he does and with whom... the "with whom" according to this unusual film, is usually a blonde who serves as model party girl and entertainer. "Travelling Husbands" achieves an intimacy, a distinctive humour, a winning pace, that strikes a new high note in film entertainment. From the front bench the cast, and is supported by Frank Albertson, Constance Cummings, Hugh Herbert, Stanley Fields and Frank McHugh. It is not often that screen fare of "Travelling Husbands" calibre is offered. It is a film well worth seeing.

HELD PRISONER

MR. LI KUO-CHIEH UNDER
POLICE GUARD

Shanghai, Nov. 14.
Mr. Li Kuo-chieh, former Director of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company, who has been held under supervision in the Municipal Government building, is now actually a prisoner, not being allowed to see guests and being kept under police guard.

He will be held pending the result of the investigations by the new administration under Mr. Liu Hung-shen, who assumed his office this morning.

Interviewed by Reuters, Mr. Chu Chin-hua stated the loan was signed by Li Kuo-chieh with the China Realty Co. The C.M.S.C. had not reported to the Government after the signature and the Ministry of Communications had not been informed of the nature of the agreement. When the Communications Ministry asked about the agreement, Li Kuo-chieh sent a duplicate agreement to the Ministry.

Four Annexes.

It is understood that the agreement had four annexes, the nature of which has not been revealed. Li Kuo-chieh will be held until all documents, including the annexes have been examined. The Government is not prepared to recognize the agreement if it in any way infringes Chinese rights to the C.M.S.C.

It is again emphasized that as the agreement was concluded without the sanction of the Ministry of Communications it could not be considered valid.

Marquis Li Kuo-chieh is the grandson of the famous Marquis Li Hung-chang.—Reuters Special.

JAPANESE DISCORD

BUDGET POLICY AROUSES
APPREHENSION

Tokyo, Nov. 14.
Increasing criticism and apprehension is being voiced regarding the financial situation and the Cabinet's persistence in the present budget policy of unlimited borrowing and filling a huge deficit by an issue of bonds.

The Seiyukai appear to be divided between a desire to debate the Government for agreeing to such a huge expenditure and a desire to criticize the failure to agree to a larger expenditure for emergency relief.

Newspapers warn the Seiyukai that the present is not the time for bickering and intrigue, but that the entire nation must rally behind those who to-day are guiding the destinies of the Japanese Empire.—Reuters.

SENATOR'S OPINION.

UNWILLING TO IMPOSE TAX
ON U.S. PEOPLE

Washington, Nov. 14.
Senator Walsh, who is considered to be in the highest democratic councils, said to-day that if the debt question was urgent, and if it was necessary to dispose of it forthwith, a special session of Congress should be called.

Senator Swanson, who will succeed Senator Borah as Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in the Senate, said that the United States people were loath to relieve the tax burden on foreigners and impose them on themselves. Many of the nations involved were superior to the United States, industrially and financially.—Our Own Correspondent.

SIKH ANNIVERSARY.

BIRTHDAY OF FOUNDER OF
FAITH CELEBRATED

Members of the Sikh Community celebrated the birthday of the founder of their religion, Sri Guru Nanak Dev Ji, at the Sikh Temple Hongkong and Kowloon Docks yesterday.

The mission of Sri Guru Nanak Dev Ji was told by Mr. Purdaman Singh, the former Secretary of the Sikh community, and by Mr. Awatar Singh, the Secretary of the Hongkong Sikh Temple.

The religious performances being over, the party from the Kowloon Docks Temple congregated at the Kowloon Indians Tennis Club to witness the Children Sports staged by Mr. Sapporan Singh. There were numerous entries for the various events and keen interest was shown by all the children present. The presence of several Indian ladies went a long way to make this function a great success. Amongst the numerous interested spectators was the Club's Secretary Mr. Ferz Ali. Mr. Kehar Singh one of the pillars of the Sikh community distributed the prizes at the conclusion of the Sports.

The next item on the programme was the "Kavi Darbar" which was opened by Mr. Purdaman Singh the former Secretary of the Hongkong Sikh Temple, amidst deafening cheers. The Kavis (Poets) read their poems which dealt chiefly with the teachings of Guru Nanak Ji with deserving applause from the interested audience.

This concluded the evening's programme and the guests were then entertained to a happy dinner party at the club pavilion. This was accompanied by Radio broadcast from various Indian stations, through the courtesy of Mr. J. M. Shroff who very kindly installed his wireless receiver at the club for this function.

After a very enjoyable evening the party dispersed at midnight with happy recollections of the evening and a vote of thanks to the Hon. Treasurer Mr. Bichan Singh Dhillival for his untiring efforts to make this function such a great success.

E. the Officer Administering the Government, the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern.

The Executive Committee of this ball, of which Hon. Mr. W. E. L. Shenton is Chairman, and Hon. Mr. S. W. To and Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau are the Vice-chairmen, is preparing an excellent programme in order to make the function in every respect enjoyable. Hon. Sir Shouson Chow has kindly consented to perform the opening ceremony of the ball.

A cover charge of $5 each will include supper, kindly supplied by the Management of the Hotel Cecil. Tickets for the function may be had from the Hotel Cecil or from the ticket committee headed by Mr. Peter H. Sin, Padder Building, and Mr. Ngan Shing-kwan, of the Kwai Bank Ltd.

ALL CABIN-CLASS PLAN

The States Steamship Company announce that the first steamer in their New Passenger Service, the s.s. General Pershing, sails from Portland, Oregon on December 24 via Yokohama, Kobe and Shanghai, and is due to arrive at Hongkong on January 21, returning here from Manila on January 28 and sailing on January 29. The General Pershing is due to arrive at San Francisco on February 20 and Portland, Oregon on February 25.

This steamer will be followed, 21 days later, by the s.s. General Grant, sailing from Portland on January 18 followed by the s.s. General Lee on February 8.

These steamers have a capacity for 94 cabin class passengers, and regular sailings are arranged every 21 days. The inauguration of entire cabin class steamer service in the Trans-Pacific trade is a new departure and should prove popular at the reduced rates offered.

ATTITUDE

London, Nov. 14.

Dublin messages declare that Mr. Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister of the Irish Free State, will go to Geneva on Wednesday to preside at the meeting of the League of Nations Council.

He is booked to face a motion of censure in the Dail to-morrow on his attitude over the land annuities dispute, but he is in no danger of defeat as the Labour Party will oppose the motion.—Our Own Correspondent.

In addition to their allowing the free use of their newly-decorated and spacious dining hall, it is hoped that the public will avail itself of this occasion both to enjoy the dancing as well as to contribute to the deserving cause sponsored by the Hongkong Society for the Protection of Children.

LABOUR PARTY CONFERENCE

MR. WEDGWOOD BENN'S OVATION

CHAIRMAN'S THREAT TO INTERRUPTORS

The Labour Party's annual conference opened with a breezy, cheery address by Mr. Geo. Lathan, the Chairman.

He claimed that the Party had never been in better heart, and he pointed to the recent by-elections as evidence of their growing strength and of their perfect unity with the Trade Union and Co-operative movements.

Mr. Lathan then attacked the Government for the future of its "old-fashioned Tory methods" of solving our difficulties, by reducing the purchasing power of the people and protecting the pockets of the well-to-do.

He pointed to the "infamous circular recently published by the Board of Education" as the latest example of "the Government's relentless pursuit of economy, regardless of social consequences."

Crisis Exploited.

He charged the Tory leaders with "exploiting a national crisis to further their own narrow party ends by forcing a comprehensive tariff system on the country."

He quoted the boast of the Central Council of the Conservative Party in its annual report, that "the most striking result of the policy of internal co-operation is to be seen in the fact that within six months of the National Government's formation the principle of Protection embodying a clear measure of Empire preference had become the law of the land as the considered decision of the nation, to which Free Traders were able to offer no opposition beyond a last gesture of protest."

Mr. Lathan blamed the Liberals for having helped to lend effect to this Tory taunt by supporting the National Government, with resultant damage to "reform," reconstruction, disarmament, economic co-operation, education, the social services, the condition of the people, all matters which Liberals had claimed to hold dear.

It was idle to pretend that the outlook had become brighter.

"The grim spectacle of 3,000,000 unemployed workers, of idle mines, idle mills and factories, and idle ships rusting at their anchors, is a sufficient answer to those who profess to see a lifting of the clouds."

He concluded by affirming the conviction of the Labour executive that "the only way out of the grave difficulties of our time is through courageous planning, national and international."

Loud applause acclaimed his declaration that Labour could only be justified as a Socialist body working towards a Socialist objective.

Mr. Henderson.

The general theme of the chairman's address was amplified by Mr. Arthur Henderson.

The Labour Party, he said, could not allow itself to become self-satisfied or complacent, but at the same time it must pursue its objects in its own way and must not allow itself to be diverted by sectional criticisms.

There had been nothing more remarkable in the Party's history, he claimed, than the magnificent solidarity and devotion shown last year in face of the deadliest attack ever launched against a political party, and the rightness of their resistance had now been proved by the naked and unashamed Protectionist-Tory reaction of the National Government.

Circumstances and conditions, both national and international, have but confirmed us in our view and have given new emphasis to the need for drastic Socialism.

A new social order must be substituted for the present system.

He concluded, amid loud cheers: "The future is ours if we will only grasp it."

The most rousing speech of the day was delivered by Mr. Wedgwood Benn on a resolution "on India moved by Mr. Lansbury. At the beginning of his speech the ex-Secretary for India was subjected to so many violent interruptions that the chairman had to threaten the expulsion of the interrupters.

Mr. Benn eloquently pleaded the difficulties and complexities of trying to govern India from a street in London without knowing exactly what was going on there. In 1920 the Labour Government found almost universal boycott and mistrust, but after two years of patient endeavour, as general a spirit of co-operation had been awakened that a conference was sitting.

When success was within their grasp there came the General Election, and the Prime Minister hurriedly closed the conference.

There was only one possible policy, which was to get back to the will to peace.

The speech, delivered with tremendous spirit, carried the audience into the greatest enthusiasm of the day, and the resolution was passed unanimously.

"Beastly" Means Test.

Another animated discussion took place on a resolution demanding the withdrawal of the regulations governing the payment of unemployment insurance transitional benefit. Mr. Ben Tillett, speaking with his old fiery vehemence, advocated a constructive and systematic organisation of protest from all Socialistic centres, trade union branches and Co-operative societies.

He ridiculed the armchair revolutionists and highbrow academic critics, and advised vital and robust open-air agitation.

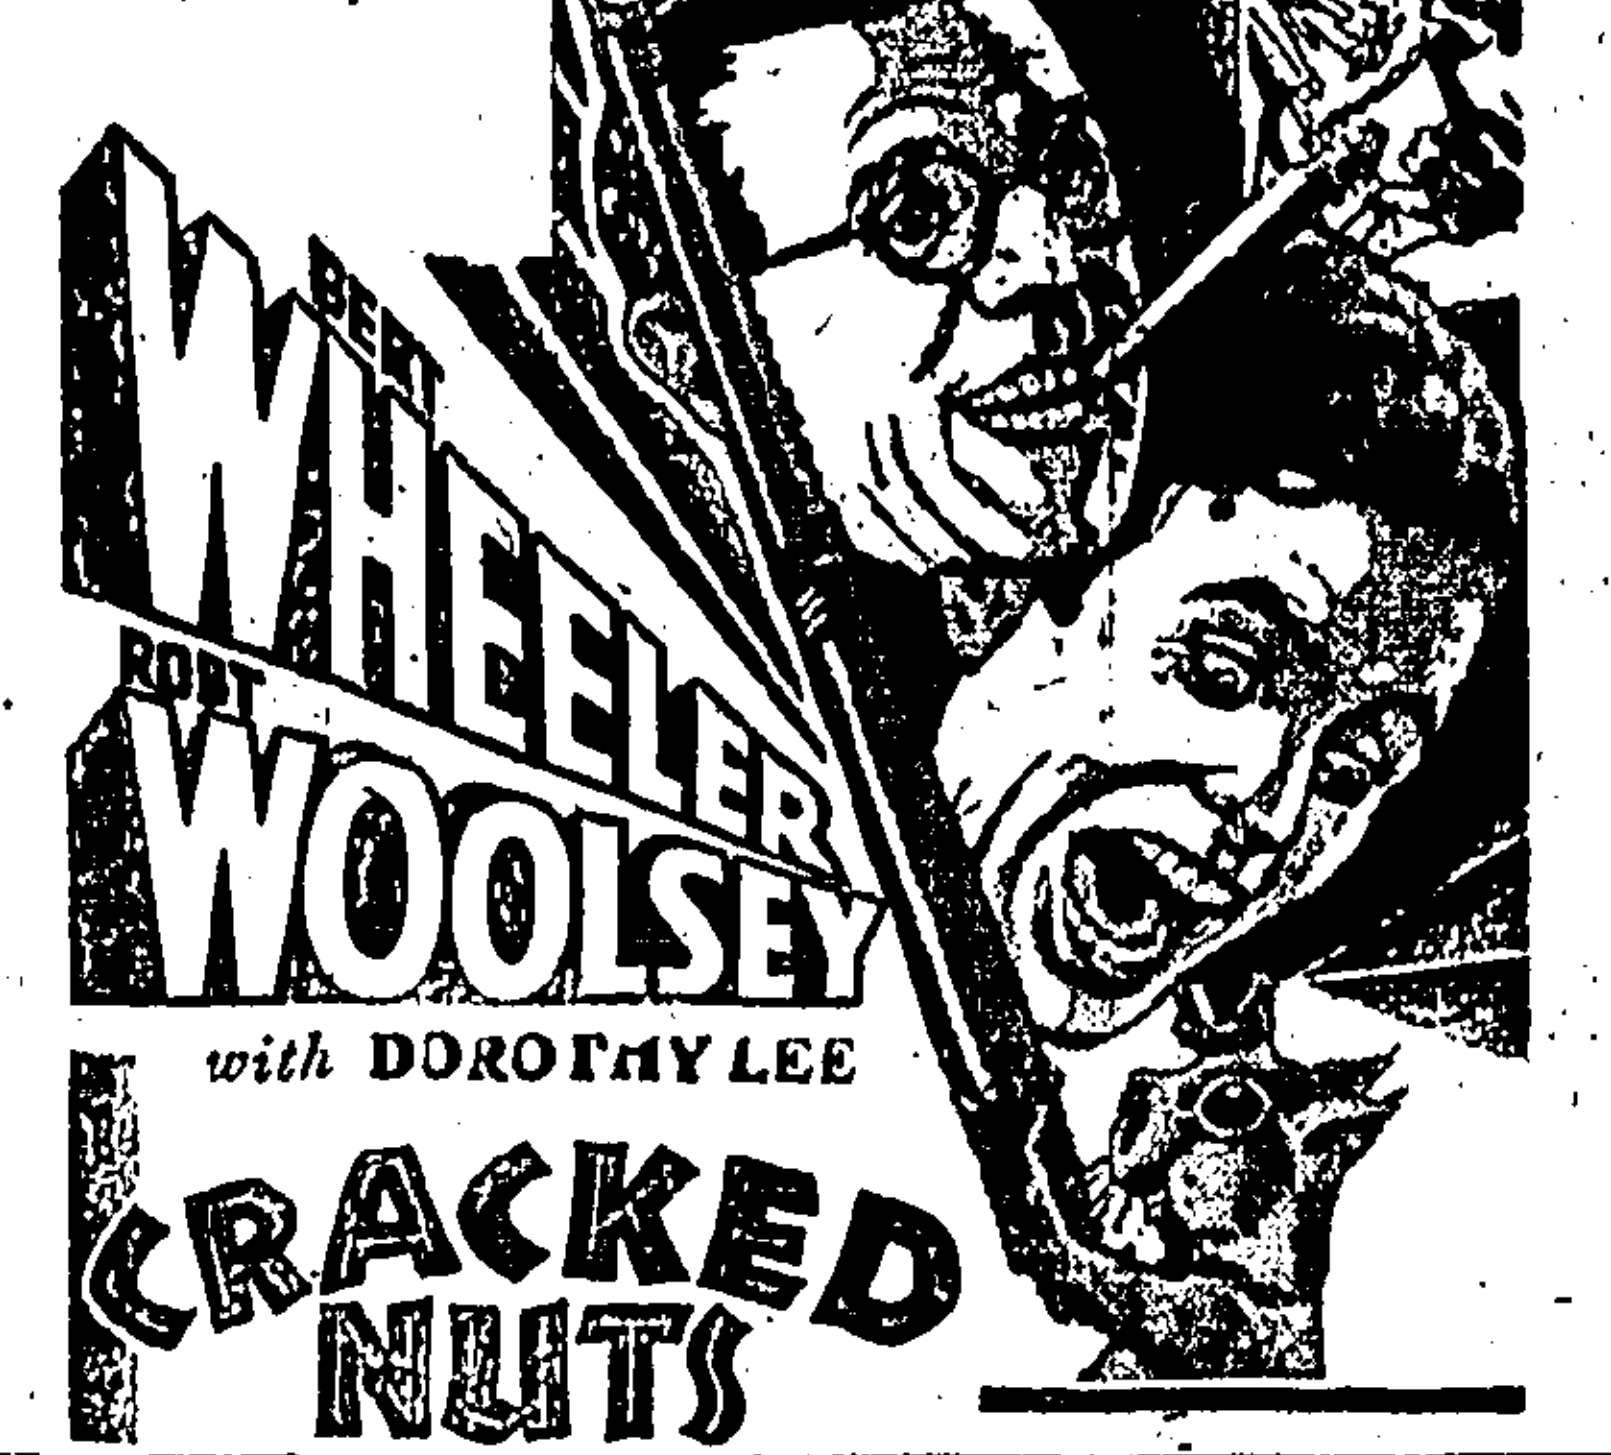

Mr. Shawell, Secretary of Mines in the late Labour Government, urged that Labour authorities should refuse to administer the means test and give the Commissioners as much trouble as they could.

Mr. Lansbury told how he and his Parliamentary colleagues had fought against "the beastly inflexion" how they had been told that they did not represent the (Continued on Next Column.)

unemployed, who had repudiated them at the last election and had been quite agreeable to the equality of sacrifice they were now enjoying.

This resolution, also, was carried unanimously. Twice during the day's debates the question arose of the Party's acceptance of office if opportunity occurred, and Sir Charles Trevelyan asked the Executive to state how it was proposed that the next Labour Government should be formed.

Mr. Henderson's official reply was that, in the event of the opportunity another conference of the Party would immediately be convened to decide their action.

SPARKING HARE LOSES ITS TAIL AFTER A "FIREWORKS" RACE

During a race at the Harringay greyhound track masses of sparks were seen to come from the hare-part of the mechanism of which had broken.

Four dogs made a dash for the hare as it began to slow down and kennel boys found it almost impossible to hold the dogs in check.

Extended form, one of the competitors, pushed over a hurdle and grabbing the hare, pulled off its tail. As he was borne to the kennels he refused to let go of the tail.

MR. ROOSEVELT SHIES AT WAR DEBT ISSUES

HAPPY TO CONFER

BUT NOT THIS WEEK

"RESPONSIBILITY OF PRESENT EXECUTIVE"

TAKING HOLIDAY

New York, Nov. 14.

Mr. Franklin Roosevelt appears to be in no hurry to discuss the war debt issue with President Hoover. The conference which was proposed by the President to take place this week will probably not take place.

Mr. Franklin Roosevelt is at present at his gubernatorial residence at Albany, N. Y. State.

In reply to Mr. Hoover's invitation, he has telegraphed stating that he will be delighted to confer with him at Washington but is unable at the present moment to suggest a definite date.

GOING ON HOLIDAY TRIP.

The President-elect is planning to go to Warm Springs, Georgia, for a holiday and for political conferences late in the present month. He will telephone President Hoover the date of his departure.

He adds that he is conferring with the Democratic leaders of the present Congress at Warm Springs and hopes that President Hoover will see them at the earliest opportunity because

"In the last analysis, the immediate question raised by the British, French and other Notes creates a responsibility which rests upon those now vested with executive and legislative authority."—Reuter.

B.B.C.'S TENTH ANNIVERSARY

AMAZING GROWTH OF BROADCASTING

London, Nov. 14.

The British Broadcasting Corporation is this week celebrating its tenth anniversary.

When the Corporation, under Royal Charter, took over the control of broadcasting on November 14th, 1922, there were 18,000 wireless licence holders in Britain. To-day there are over five million.

The total programme time ten years ago averaged thirty-three hours a week as compared with eight-thirty hours at present.

A large and flourishing industry has developed with the growth and popularity of broadcasting and now nearly 200,000 people are directly employed in the manufacture of wireless sets, while last year nearly £30,000,000 were spent in Britain on the purchase of sets and accessories.—British Wireless.

TEA RESTRICTION SCHEME

AGREEMENT REPORT PREMATURE

London, Nov. 15.

The Financial Times says that reports that an agreement has been reached between British and Dutch producers regarding tea restrictions are premature.

None of the governments concerned have yet declared their willingness to cooperate in the scheme, though it is believed that the negotiations will ultimately prove successful.—Reuter.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN TRADE

SOVIET DOES NOT REPLY TO BRITISH NOTE

London, Nov. 14.

The Prime Minister, in the House of Commons, stated that no reply has yet been received from the Soviet Government to the British Note of 17th October regarding the termination of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement.

Last Friday, the Foreign Secretary, in conversation with the Soviet Ambassador, impressed upon him that so far from seeking to injure Anglo-Russian trade as had been suggested in some quarters, the British Government desired to secure its development on proper terms.—British Wireless.

HURRICANE TOLL

CAYMAN ISLANDS DISASTER

MANY DEATHS AND HEAVY DAMAGE

London, Nov. 14.

The disastrous hurricane which demolished Vera Cruz with terrible loss of life, also wrecked much havoc on British islands in the zone.

Telegrams from Jamaica, received at the Colonial Office regarding the effect of the hurricane in the West Indies, report that the full force of the storm struck Cayman islands.

In Cayman Brac, sixty-seven persons are known to have been killed and over a hundred injured.

All stores and houses there and in Lesser Cayman were completely destroyed.

The Royal Mail s.s. Loch Katrine is carrying stores and doctors from Kingston. The only material damage occurred on Grand Cayman but in Lesser Cayman many persons were injured.

In Jamaica, where two deaths are reported, the loss in bananas was not less than five million stems, but apart from smashed wharves and the wrecking of one hotel on the north coast the damage to other property is comparatively small.

The Governor of the Bahamas reports the total destruction of crops in Long Island, Rum Cay and San Salvador. Two persons were drowned and one died from shock.

King's Message.

The King has sent a message conveying his profound sympathy to the inhabitants of Cayman Islands.

The Colonial Secretary, in a telegram to the Officer Administering the Government of Jamaica states: "Much distressed at news of heavy loss of life and property in Cayman Islands. Am glad to note you are taking all possible steps to render assistance. Please convey my deepest sympathy to the people of Cayman Island."—British Wireless.

DOLLAR LINE'S DENIAL

NO PART IN LOAN TO C.M.S.N. CO.

CHINA REALTY'S POSITION

(Special to "Telegraph")

Shanghai, Nov. 15. A denial by Dollar Line officials that their company is in any way connected with the loan of the China Realty Company to the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company is the latest development in the affairs of the Chinese company.

The amount of the loan is now stated to be thirty million dollars. Meanwhile, there is good reason to believe the Chinese reports that Marquis Li Kuo-chieh's status has been changed from that of an Official of the C.M.S.N. Co. under surveillance to that of a prisoner.

GOVERNMENT'S MOVE.

It is stated that the Government, which recently decided to convert the C.M.S.N. company into a State enterprise, will pay fifty taels per share, although the market price is only a little more than thirty taels per share.

A China Realty official told pressmen to-day that the agreement between his company and the China Merchants S.N. company culminating in the loan was signed after negotiations covering a period of three years.—Reuter.

PRINCE VISITING ULSTER

ELABORATE PLANS FOR RECEPTION

BELFAST GAILY DECORATED

PARLIAMENT BUILDING OPENING

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Nov. 15.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is paying his first official visit to Northern Ireland to-morrow when he will formally open the magnificent new building of the Ulster Parliament.

Among the preparations in anticipation of the Royal visit, an extensive programme of street decoration in Belfast has been abandoned at the request of the Prince.

Nevertheless elaborate arrangements are being made for the Prince's reception. Shopkeepers are making Belfast gay with flags and bunting while eight thousand Orangemen volunteers and stewards will supplement the two thousand police lining the streets.

STORMONT PARADE.

Two thousand troops will salute the Prince at Stormont, where the Parliament Building is situated.

Two cruisers will form a naval guard for the Prince from Liverpool to the harbour in Belfast, while Ulster bombing squadrons have been rehearsing their part in the ceremonies, which include the provision of an aerial escort from Liverpool and a demonstration over the Parliament buildings while the opening ceremony is being performed.

There will be a distinguished gathering at the opening, arrangements having been made to accommodate five thousand leading residents of Northern Ireland in a special enclosure outside.

YAUMATI FIRE

Building Completely Gutted

ONE OF A SERIES

Fires have been breaking out with marked regularity during the past month and another was added to the number during the early hours of this morning when a conflagration took toll of the entire building situated at 281, Reclamation Street. Fortunately, there was no loss of life or injury to persons.

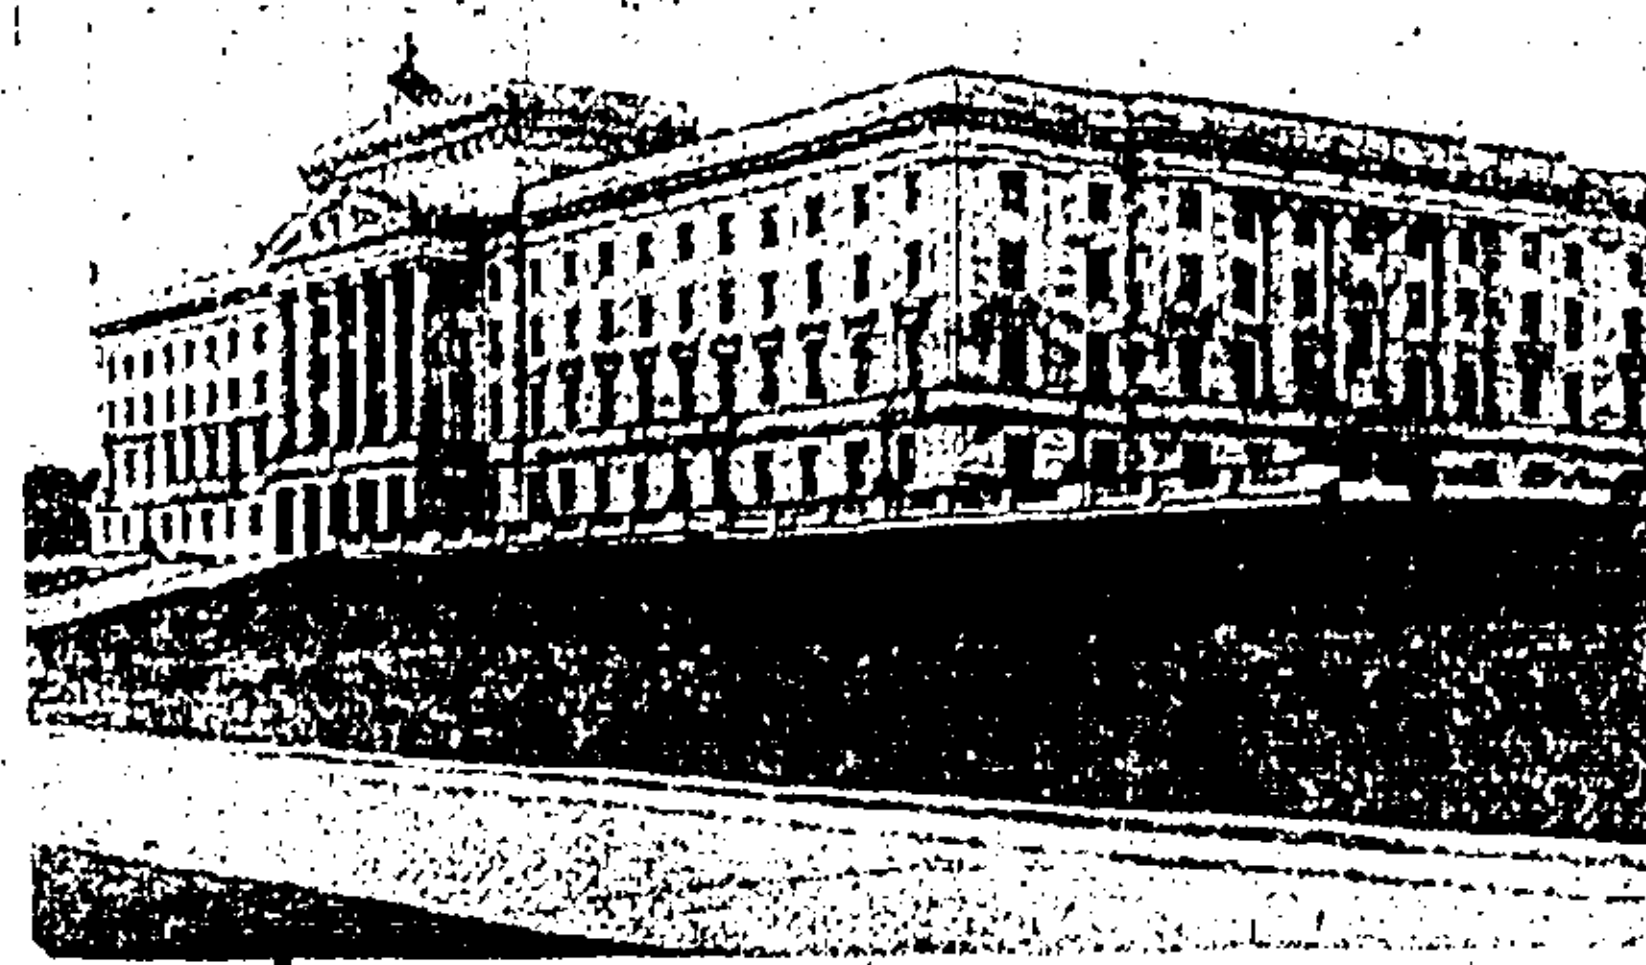

The outbreak had its origin in the ground floor of the building where a Chinese medicine shop, the Pak Fuk Tong had its headquarters. It is believed that an oven which was used to dry herbs set the premises ablaze, the staircase acting as a flue for the flames, which soon spread to the upper floors.

The Kowloon Fire Brigade were summoned to the scene and instantly set to work fighting the outbreak which was not subdued until the three floors had been almost completely gutted.

It is understood that the medicine shop was insured for $3,000.

CANTON ROAD VICTIM.

A victim of the fire at 972, Canton Road on Wednesday morning last, Wong Cheung, aged 49, who was admitted to Kowloon Hospital suffering from severe injuries caused by a fall in attempting to escape down a drain pipe, died at 5.55 a.m. yesterday.

BRITISH "PLAN" TO-MORROW

AT DISARMAMENT BUREAU

A GIANT STRIDE?

London, Nov. 14.

The Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, who reached Geneva to-day, had long conversations with the President of the Disarmament Conference, Mr. Arthur Henderson, the chief American delegate, Mr. Norman Davis, and various other delegates.

He will announce his new contribution to a general solution of the disarmament problem at Wednesday's meeting of the Bureau.

Important speeches made by Sir John Simon and Mr. Baldwin in Friday night's Commons debate on disarmament gave an indication of the general principle upon which the British Government have framed their policy.

The actual proposals which Sir John Simon will make are expected to be of far-reaching scope. It is, however, understood that they have been designed with strict regard to the realities of the situation and are not to be regarded as counter-proposals to those which have been made by other delegations.

They are intended to be a helpful contribution towards a practical solution of the problem and are not necessarily fresh "Plan."—British Wireless.

As a general rule it is best for the declarer to pick up the outstanding trump, but in the following hand the declarer must establish his side suit before touching trump unless forced to by the opponents, and then he must be careful not to take the finesse.

The Bidding

South, the dealer, opened the bidding with one heart. West overcalled with one spade. North, well satisfied with spades, passed. East then bid two clubs. South bid two diamonds. West passed and now North went to two No Trump. East passed and South bid three hearts which North carried to four hearts. West made a poor double.

The Play

The natural opening for West was the 10 of clubs after his partner had bid clubs, but the best defence was put up at one table where West opened the ace of spades. East playing the seven spot. West continued with the queen of spades. Declarer refused to play the king from dummy, putting on the eight spot. East made a very nice play of trumping his partner's good queen with the deuce of hearts and immediately leading a heart. But the declarer met this defence by going right up with his ace of hearts and then leading the four of clubs which was won in dummy with the ace. A small diamond was led from dummy and when East played the four, the declarer finessed the queen which held the trick. The ace of diamonds was then led which captured West's jack.

Declarer next played a small diamond and regardless of what West does, the declarer can make his contract. Perhaps the best defence was where West played the king of hearts, dummy discarding the seven of clubs and East played the 10 of diamonds. The 10 of clubs was led by West, but the declarer trumped with the eight of hearts. All he had to do now was to lead the 10 of hearts from dummy, win in his own hand with the jack, and the rest of his tricks were good—for four—odd doubled.

USE OF LEISURE

MR. J. D. BUSH'S ADDRESS
TO CHINESE STUDENTS

An inspiring address on the use of leisure was delivered to Christian students at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. on Sunday morning by Mr. J. D. Bush. The speaker said:

When I was asked several weeks ago to address you on this Sunday gathering for students, I felt I had no choice but to accept. The compulsion came from the fact that I learnt of your keenness and enthusiasm to attend these gatherings. Both my esteemed friend, Dr. Y. H. Tsao and Mr. Fu, the Students Secretary, have given me to understand that you are eager to listen to what your senior contemporaries have to tell you or impart to you of life from the many angles of vision. Like the speakers before me, I do not come to pour maxims down into your throat. All that I want to do is to point out to you one of the many signposts on the high road of life directing the observant and vigilant to the right paths leading to things of interest and value or eternal verities.

One of these signposts to which I wish to direct your attention for a few minutes is the use of leisure. It is not true that the greatest question with life, from youth to old age, is how we spend our time? The most important thing to learn in life, in short, is how to use time purposefully and usefully. Deducting the time required for sleep, for meals, for dressing and undressing, for exercises, for social functions, how little remains at our own disposal in which to develop the mind, intellect or the higher self. Not so very many years ago, I was a student like you. Speaking then from the experience of a student and a teacher I know your problems quite intimately. In the golden season of youth, when the blood is tingling in your veins and when there is always plenty in everything to be squandered, soon and late we lay waste our power, physically, intellectually and spiritually. And you will have to run through quite a cycle of experience before you come to yourself. Some will never come to themselves, spiritually as well as intellectually they will remain anchorless.

Being anchorless, this class of youth will obviously go on drifting like timbers in the high seas. Youth, in general, may be divided into three categories. First, forming the majority are those who seek only entertainment in the form of dancing, gambling, cinema, a little dissipation, preferably in the out-of-the-way places, some distance from home. They are incapable of making themselves happy without having to pay entertainment fees. In other words, they have yet to learn to appreciate the difference between pleasure-seeking and pleasure-finding. I know how hard it is to be at once young and wise.

Devotion to Sports.

The second class of youth consists of those who are devoted to sports and many make games the business of life. In China of today, everything should be done to encourage sports and sportsmanship. There is a good deal in what the Duke of Wellington said of the Battle of Waterloo being won on the playing field of Eton College. And time spent in innocent and rational enjoyments, in healthy games, in social and family intercourse is well and wisely spent. Nevertheless time given up entirely to pleasure and recreation would of course be not only selfish, but intolerably wasteful. Perhaps this class of youth may be too young to care for the goods of the mind. The average run of mankind, a philosopher has said: in youth spends money on love, in middle age on food and in old age on medicine.

The worth of a life is to be measured ultimately by intellectual power and moral stature. This leads me to consider the third class of youth. They are comparatively few in number and they are those who are devoted to hobbies—chiefly literature, science, art (I include photography) music and wireless. As a teacher, I am strongly in-

SALES MANAGER CONVICTED.

EMBEZZLEMENT DURING
8-YEAR PERIOD

At the conclusion of the case against Tsui Wal-chung, charged with embezzlement, before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, the accused was found guilty and sentenced to the maximum summary sentence of six months' hard labour.

Tsui was the manager in charge of the local export office of the Shing Tak Weaving Factory of Shanghai, and the defalcations were said to have commenced very shortly after his assumption of the post eight years ago and to have continued until October last when he was arrested upon a complaint lodged with the Police by the head office. Although the total amount involved was alleged to have totalled over $16,000, for the purposes of the trial only two items, $198 and $93 respectively, were selected for investigation.

Mr. Horace Lo was for the prosecution and Mr. F.C.E. Randall for the defence.

Interested in this group for they are really the salt of the earth. They are the kind of young men who are never dull for they know that true value of time; snatch, seize and enjoy every moment of it to learn something, do something and understand something. Their pleasures belong to the realm which follows the law of increasing and not of diminishing returns. The more a youth clings to these hobbies, the more he knows about it, the more absorbing is the interest of it. There is indeed no season of the year and no time of life at which interest ceases. The interest goes on to venerable old age.

Read Good Books.

If I can proffer you a bit of advice, develop your taste, for books, not the ephemeral trash of the time, but the great books that have stood the test of time. From these great books you shall get, not only the most lasting pleasure, but a standard "by which to measure our own thoughts, the thoughts of others, and the excellence of the literature of our own day." It is the higher and intelligent life that you should strive to attain. There is no royal road to learning. Each man has to find his own path to intellectual and moral attainments. The higher you climb the harder the toll. Withal, there is much of the admixture of the sweet in sad and the sad in sweet.

There is a passage in Romans in which George Eliot describes this kind of inexperience of the scholar. "We can only have the highest happiness, such as goes along with being a great man, by having wide thoughts, and much feeling for the rest of the world as well as ourselves; and this sort of happiness often brings so much pain with it that we can only tell it from pain by its being what we would choose before everything else, because our soul sees it is good."

If you would advance in life, begin to advance from within, and wealth and honour will be added unto you. If I were you, I would not be over-anxious about wealth (wealth too often pecunia olet) and honour, and be more anxious about the advancement of your own people and country; in other words, strive for leadership. I will close this address, as the time is creeping on fast, with these words from Viscount Halifax:

"Your way is clear—to get the best you can for yourselves in this generally unique period of your lives, and to strive with all your power to make the fullest use of what you have got, and to impart it to those around you. It is so that you will begin to fulfil the duty you have to discharge now, and will have to discharge still more later on in life—of striving to develop the soul of the people to whom you belong."

Give some of your leisure to the achievement of the highest good in life—loyalty to the Highest Good.

CALL of the WEST

CHAPTER XXII.

Dona let the big roan take his own course. She was suddenly aware that the reason she did not want to marry Dudley Winters was because she did not love him. The rush of mingled feelings that had almost swept aside her control when she faced Stanley Black had been a revelation to her. One thing made it easier for her to think of marrying Dudley. That was the fact that Stanley obviously did not share her feelings. He could not possibly have acted so cool and controlled if he cared for her.

The roan, left to his own devices, took a short cut that led straight to the camp. Dona was not aware of this until they entered a little clearing at the lower edge of which stood a neat log cabin. Trees shaded the place and made it an inviting picture. Suddenly the girl realized that she was hot and thirsty. She pulled the roan to a halt at the open door of the cabin. Here was a chance to get a drink.

At the top of her quilt on the door moulding, a woman's voice answered. A second later a dark-eyed Spanish girl appeared at the door. She had seen Dona approaching and had made a hasty attempt to toss aside several articles that lay about. Dona smiled.

"Could I beg a drink of water?" "Yes, Miss. Will you come inside and rest?" The little Spanish girl was very attractive and her voice was alluringly soft.

Dona stepped inside and sank into the chair offered her. The cabin had two rooms, one a kitchen and living room, and the other a bedroom with two cots. Everything was clean and neatly arranged. A bright shawl hung from the image of a dancing girl occupying a little shelf in one corner. Dona could feel the romantic atmosphere of the place and she settled back with a sigh.

"You ride far?" the Spanish girl asked. Her wide, dark eyes were fastened on Dona's riding boots and trousers.

"Not so far, but I'm thirsty just the same," Dona met the dark eyes and decided that the little senorita was as attractive as any maid from old Seville.

"I go for water. Excuse please!" The girl bowed and vanished out of a back door.

Dona sat looking curiously about. An object caught her eye and held it. It was a buckskin glove such as most cowboys wear. The right glove. Dona's eyes narrowed and a queer stab that might have been jealousy went through her heart. She remembered that Stanley Black had worn no glove on his right hand. Dona caught herself up short. She had no right to criticize. He had never by the slightest word pledged himself. Still she had not thought of him as a man who would amuse himself with such a girl as the one who had just stepped outside.

Her hostess returned with a pitcher and a glass. Dona drank deeply and gratefully. "Thank you," she murmured.

The Spanish girl sat down and folded her hands.

"You live here with your parents?" Dona asked.

"With my father. He works for the timber company. A wide smile spread over the features of the girl.

"I know many boys at the camp." "What is your name?" Dona asked absently. The glove on the floor beside the cot held her attention in spite of herself.

"Rosa Trujillo." The Spanish girl noticed Dona's eyes on the glove. With a blush she picked it up and put it on a little stand. "The handsome cowboy forgot his glove," she said naively.

"The handsome cowboy from Blind River?" Dona prompted.

Rosa nodded. "From Blind River, yes. The cowboys come from Blind River over the hill trail."

"Do many of them come this way?"

"Not many now. Only one. Trouble come with the timber company," Rosa explained.

Dona rose. "I am very thankful for the drink and for the rest," she said smilingly.

Rosa stepped to the door with her. "You come back sometime?" she invited.

"Thanks. I don't think I'll be up in the hills much longer." Dona walked to her horse and swung into the saddle slowly.

Rosa waved to her as she rode away and Dona replied with a wide swing of her quilt. Down the trail the roan trotted, eager to be back at the corral.

Dona laughed a tight little laugh as she thought back over the events of the afternoon. Some guiding hand must have held her when she was face to face with Stanley Black. He was just another cowboy who took his fun where he found it. No doubt he was amusing himself at the expense of little Rosa's innocence, playing the handsome caballero but ready to ride away when he got ready.

The roan increased his pace and broke out into the clearing above the camp. Dona resolved that she would play the game and go through with her bargain. She would drive down to Sam Dean's and marry Dudley.

He was at the corral when she rode up. Dudley tried to look as though he had been waiting a long time for her but Malloy spoiled this by calling to him. "I just pulled the saddle off your buckskin. If you want to ride again this evening let me know and I'll run in another horse. Horses that come in after four are turned out to graze." The tall corral boss grinned wickedly as he spoke.

Dudley did not reply to this but faced Dona. "Looks as though we both overstay a little."

Dona smiled sweetly. "You'll have to improve, Dud, or I'll take up golf."

He grinned in relief. "I have a real excuse but I was afraid it would sound phoney. I made a lot of headway to-day."

"I'm glad you did but I'm afraid you'll have to give up your prowling in the hills and play domestic for a while."

They mounted the steps to the main building and Dona crossed to her father's room. Asper was sitting up and greeted her with a smile that held much of his old vigor.

"Just as I expected! You two would desert an old man."

"We'll make up for it by pestering you all day to-morrow," Dona promised.

MOONLIGHT, a picturesque mountain camp, a pretty girl and a dashing cowboy. With such romantic elements of course there's a love story in "Call of the West" by R. G. Montgomery. There's adventure and excitement too in this thrilling new serial.

She went to her room and began to get ready for the trip to Dean's. Dudley was busy in his room. The door was open and she could hear him splashing and spluttering as he washed up.

Dona delayed as long as possible in her room and when she came out Dudley greeted her with a flourish. He struck a grim pose.

"Young lady, it is almost five o'clock. Just for that you will wait and have dinner here with me!"

Dona agreed readily enough. She had suddenly discovered that she was hungry. They walked over to the dining cabin and entered. A crowd of timber men were eating noisily. The table woman led them to a small table aside from the crowd and they sat down. The noisy banter of the men died at their arrival.

"I wonder if Dad will be able to travel to-morrow?" Dona spoke almost to herself.

"What's your hurry?" Dudley countered. "I'm getting on fine with my sleuthing and it would be a shame to keep me from showing up this bunch of roughnecks."

"I'm afraid something will happen to upset him, Dud. He's an old man and we have to think of him first."

Dona was suddenly eager to be away from Folly Mountain. Something had snapped the bond that held her. She would not have admitted that it was a cowboy's right-hand glove. She still believed Stanley Black would do as he said about Ball, but that did not seem to matter so much now.

"Well, in that light, I guess you win," Dudley grinned and began a healthy attack upon the steak.

The man who had charge of the company garage was leaving after having finished his meal. Dona beckoned him to the table. "Have my roadster at the main building in half an hour," she said. She accompanied the words with a smile.

The mechanic nodded and walked on. Dona's eyes met Dudley's and they both smiled.

EPIC RESCUE IN PICTURES.

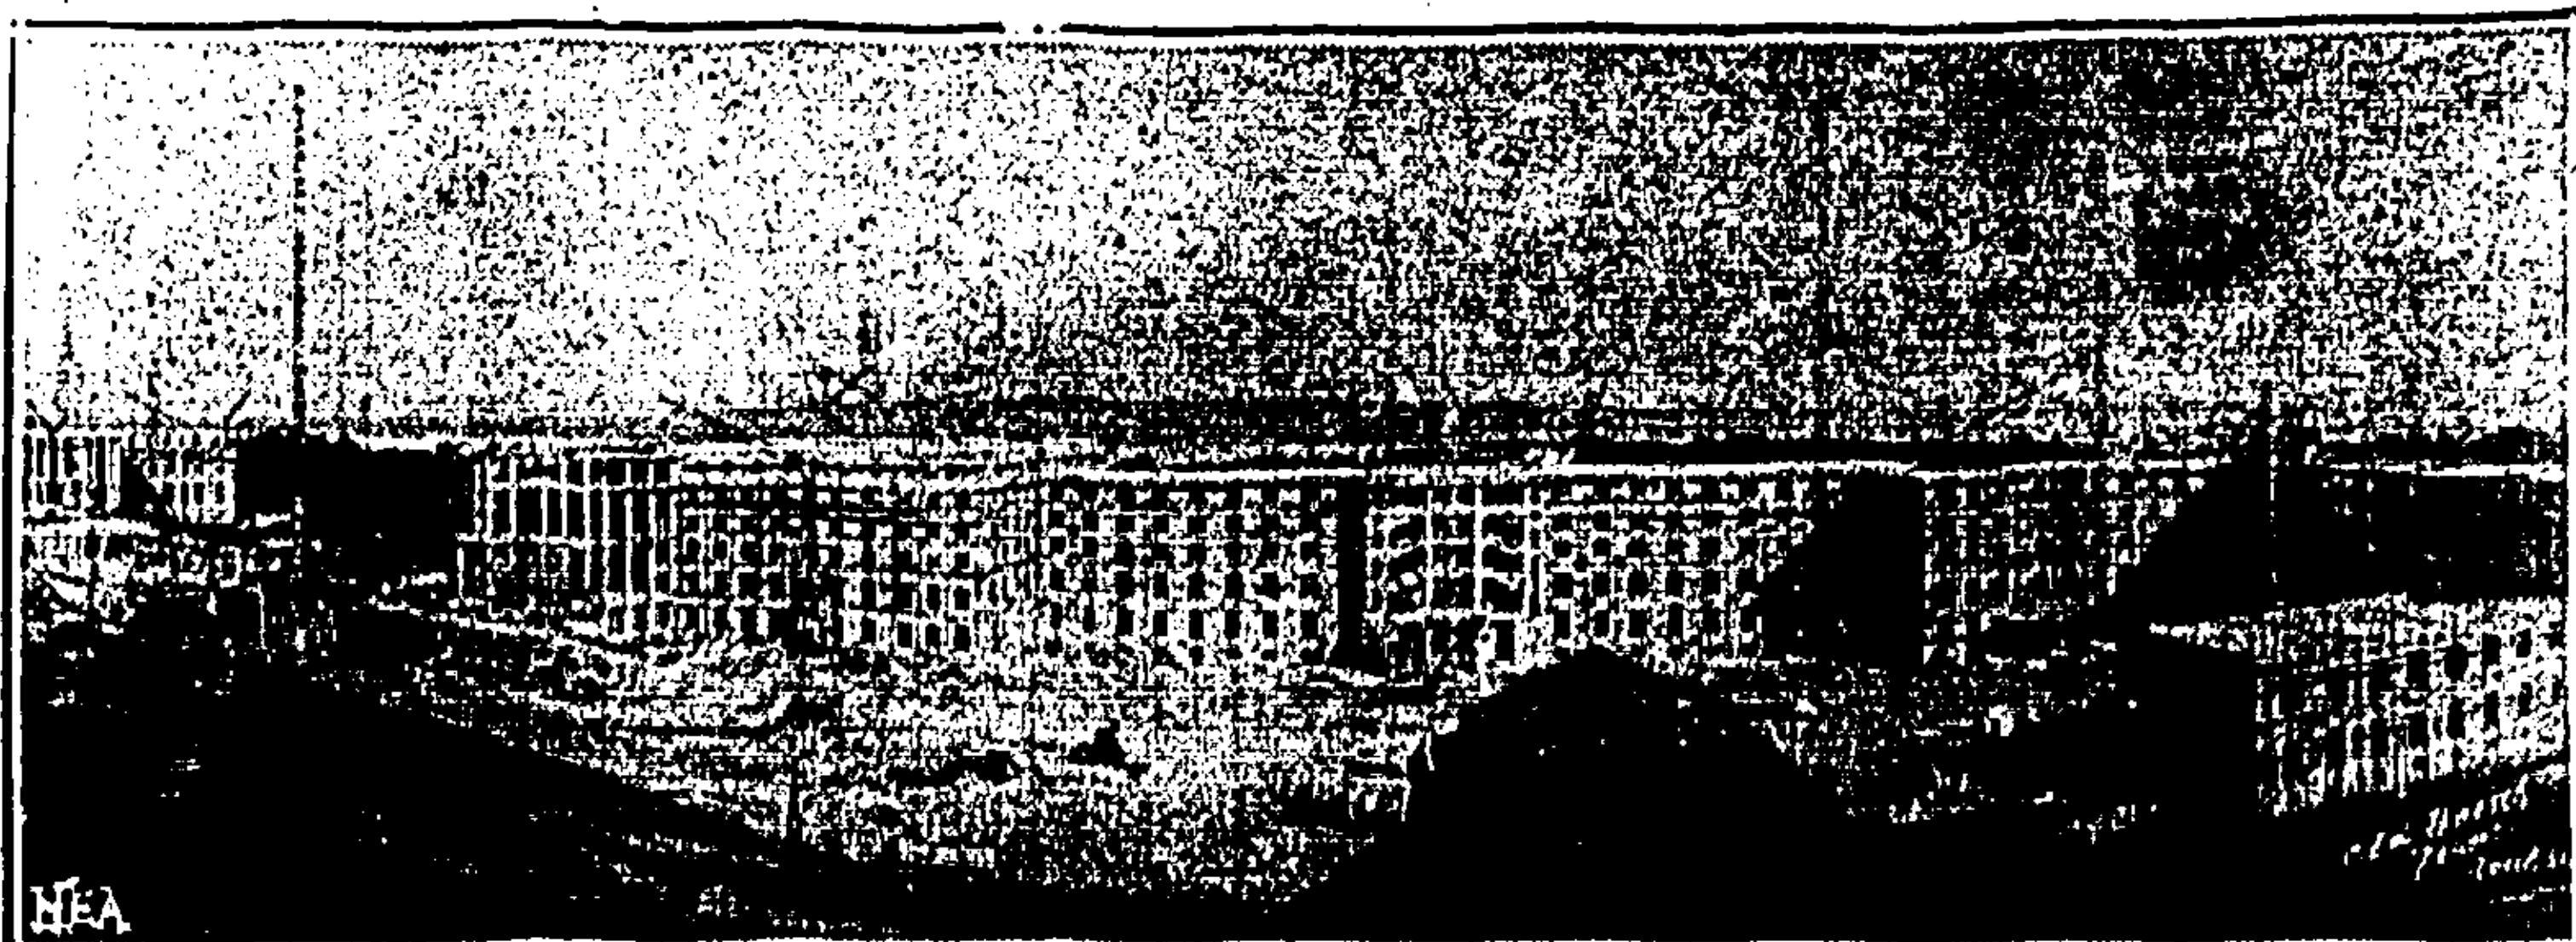

An epic of the seas was written when three men were rescued from the wreck of the Freighter Nevada, when the American Mail liner President Madison, returned to Seattle Oct. 5. The three men rescued were all who remained of the Nevada's crew of 37. They were taken from the rocky shores of Amaglik Island, Middle Alutian, when a lifeboat from the President Madison braved heavy seas to go to their rescue. The three men rescued were James Thorsen, Lucene N. Decaney and Fritz Dewall. Photo shows rescuer and rescued left to right—Lucene N. Decaney, Captain R. J. Healy, master of the President Madison and James Thorsen.

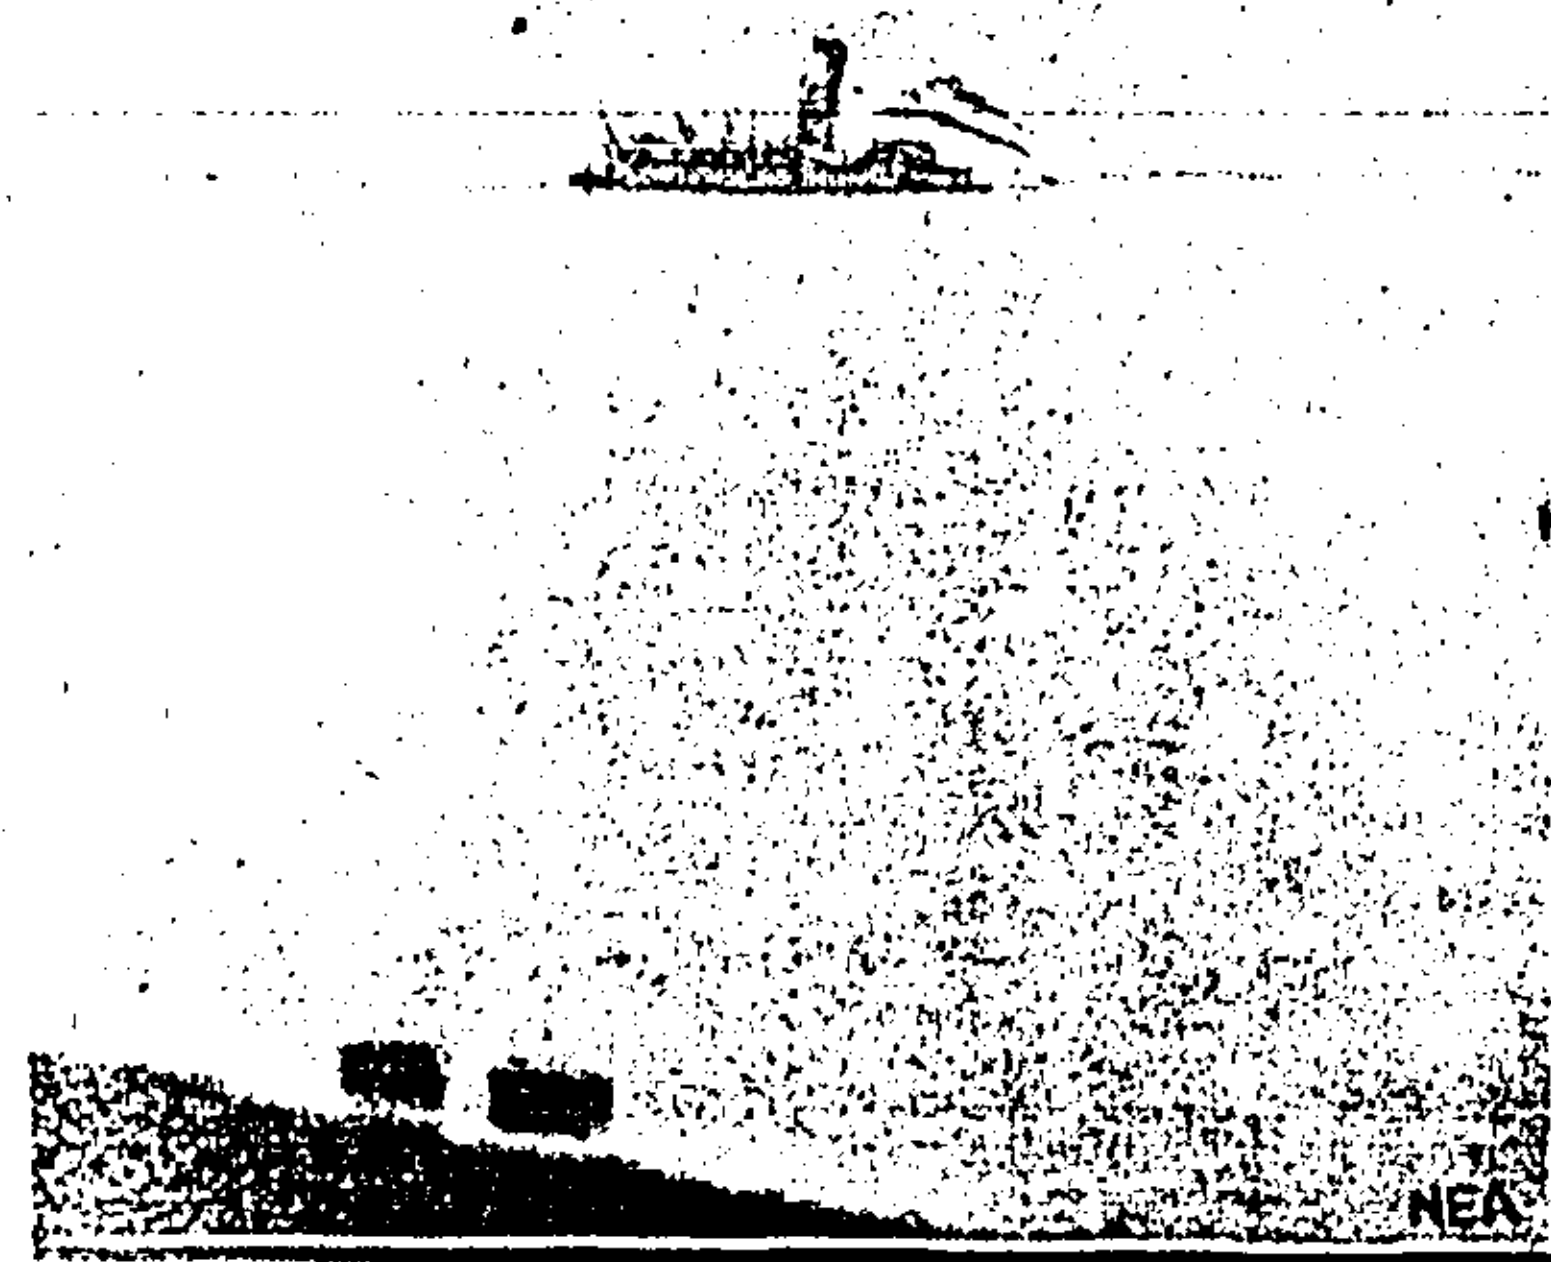

Dennis Lawrence, above, a photographer from Passaic, N.J., is held in Harrisburg, Ill., for questioning by Jersey officials as a possible suspect in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping and murder. Lawrence, who denies any knowledge of the crime, was arrested after Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh forwarded to Illinois authorities an anonymous letter that named Lawrence.

The rescue was made possible only when Eddie Blomberg, able seaman of the Madison crew, volunteered to swim ashore with a rope around his waist. Photo shows Members of the lifeboat crew from the President Madison who went to the rescue of the three men. Third Officer E. J. Stull, who commanded the boat, is seen standing in uniform. Eddie Blomberg, the man who swam ashore with the line is indicated by arrow.

Few people realize how extensive an undertaking the League of Nations is, even in the physical aspects of its plant. This picture shows the huge new office building of the League now under construction, overlooking the Lake of Geneva.

Above is a view of the Nevada breaking up on the rocky shore of Amaglik Island, after being holed.

As a result of the blarney between the pope and the Mexican government, the papal legate, Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz Flores, above, has been called to the United States.

It's a most important season for accessories, and here are sketched some of the newest ideas in ornaments for night and daytime wear. At upper right is the Vionnet trio of bracelets, oval-shaped and in translucent crystals of assorted shades. The bag, also for daytime wear, is shaped like the paper boat used to make in our childhood. It is of platted brown wool, and is very roomy. The belt is of brown suede, with brass studding. For evening wear there is another trio of bracelets (lower left), but these are of glittering rhinestones. The evening bag, by Paton, is made of black crepe. Its big jeweled clip can be removed very quickly to ornament a hat or frock.

The new geometrical hats are a combination of skilfully combined

Cotton velvet coats in bright colours are being worn over dark or bright coloured dresses. For instance, a bright red tailored man's rain frock with a cotton velvet collar of the same colour looks chic.

HOPES ON GENEVA

After so many past disappointments, it would be quite understandable if there should still be a lingering doubt regarding the probability of this week's meeting of the Bureau of the Disarmament Conference resulting in the achieving of tangible results. Yet, even making allowances for doubt based on the immensity of the problem and the difficulties of adjusting the varying viewpoints, there does seem ground for thinking that a really worthwhile effort is to be made to get down to essentials. The new French plan which would appear to make a definite advance on previous attitudes, and the clear-cut statement of British policy outlined by Sir John Simon a few days ago, contain the promise of better things, while Mr. Baldwin's dramatic analysis of the possibilities of future wars, unless the aerial issue is seriously faced, would appear to betoken a closer approach to the realities of the whole situation.

One factor of immense importance is the clarifying of the British attitude on Germany's claim to equality. This claim is now definitely accepted in principle, and the consequence of Sir John Simon's outline of British policy is that it has served to modify any impression which may have existed in Berlin that Britain is unsympathetic towards Germany. Already, before the full implications have been disclosed, the British statement has been hailed as a marked advance on the attitude disclosed when the German claim was first put forward. At that time, the British declaration that Germany's raising of the equality issue was untimely created the impression that the German viewpoint was definitely opposed. The latest statement shows this suspicion to have been unfounded. Britain admits the contention that German disarmament was intended to be the prelude to general disarmament, but it also takes note of the practical aspects of the question. It is quite clear that there cannot be an immediate scaling down of armaments by the other Powers to the limits imposed on Germany, but that does not mean that a start cannot be made. Action in this direction will have to be progressive, in well-defined stages, and it will therefore be the task of the Disarmament Conference to work out a practical scheme along these lines. The great point to be kept in mind is that no Disarmament Conference can countenance any scheme for equality which would involve the right of any Power to re-arm: such an outcome would be totally contrary to the whole spirit of the disarmament movement. If Germany will but enter the council chamber at Geneva in a mood signifying a willingness to face the realities and to work hand in hand with the other Powers in evolving a definite plan, then we have every reason to hope for practical results.

One of the most interesting and important features of Sir John Simon's latest declaration is that which relates to an undertaking by the European States that they will not attempt to resolve any present or future differences by resort to force. This is interpreted as going further than the Kellogg Pact, which precludes resort to war as an instrument of national policy. The difference arises from the use of the term "force" as contrasted with "war." We only need take the case of Japan's activities against China to realise the distinction. Japan has not been technically at war with China, but her use of force is beyond question. If the new proposal finds approval, and if the undertaking is entered into with a full recognition of all that it implies, a definite step forward in the preservation of European peace will be recorded. But such promises will be of small avail unless they are reinforced by a determined public opinion. In the last resort, it is on this point that all efforts to abolish war must depend for their effectiveness. For unless the will to peace permeates the people of Europe, or any other part of the world for that matter, even the most solemn undertakings will always be in danger of being considered mere scraps of paper. It is for the Disarmament Conference to interpret and reinforce the desire of the peace-lovers of the world. If it fails, the future outlook will indeed be dark and gloomy.

Speech Days

It is difficult to determine who is more deserving of sympathy, the notable personage called upon to address an assembled school on Speech Day, or the totally insignificant person on the hard bench, forced by circumstances over which he has no control to simulate a reasonably intelligent interest in the proceedings. On the whole, the notable personage has the worst of the ordeal, especially if he is sensitive. Many an accomplished orator would immeasurably prefer to face an angry House of Commons, or a turbulent sea of undergraduates than the Sphinx-like scrutiny of a few hundred schoolboys or schoolgirls behaving with impeccable propriety. They may be bored to death, but they are far too polite ever to indulge a yawn. Usually tongue-tied themselves, they may be elated by the mellifluousness of the speaker's diction, and almost carried away by the fervour of his message, but they suppress their emotions with an almost superhuman stoicism. The cheers, when they come, are models of decorous approbation, as delicately timed as the cheers of the villagers in a musical comedy when the old Squire says his little piece. The "big noise" on a school Speech Day would often give a good deal to know what his young audience really think about him and his carefully prepared address. He can be fairly certain of two things. If the applause is infrequent and the cheering subdued; he is not likely to be criticised for serving up the well-worn platitudes of tradition. Schoolboys are conservative: they like what is old and well-tried, especially in attempts at pleasantry. And in any event the distinguished visitor can bet his bottom shilling that, whatever he says, he and not his speech will be remembered, in after days, by young Jones or Robinson.

DAY BY DAY

THERE ARE MANY WHO MARRY FROM UTTER INDIGENCE OF THOUGHT, CAPTIVATED BY THE PLAYFULNESS OF YOUTH; AS IF THE KITTEN WERE NEVER TO BECOME A CAT.—W. S. Landor.

The lady's handbag which was found in last's Carnival Snows on Sunday evening has since been claimed by Miss Luba Bumann of Sassoon Road.

The body of an unknown Chinese, apparently that of a mendicant, was yesterday found by Sergeant Butcher clothed round the neck. The body was found about 200 yards off Customs Path.

NEW START IN LIFEDIARY OF DESPAIR

So many offers of help and promises of money for Thirza Gilett, the young woman of 27 whose pathetic Diary of Despair was revealed in court at Bristol have been received by the police that she has been given a new start in life.

This announcement was made in Bristol Police Court when she was again charged, on remand, with wandering.

She was bound over for 12 months on condition that she stayed with the Salvation Army until something was done for her. The Bench said that probably the Salvation Army would find her a situation.

A New Start Assured.

At the outset Supt. Baker told the Court that there was nothing recorded against the woman from the police point of view.

Thanking the Press for the assistance they had given in the case, Supt. Baker said he had received letters from all parts of the country. Money had also been sent, and the police would now be able to help the girl; in fact, the help given by the Press would go a long way towards putting her on her feet again.

The Superintendent added that one old-age pensioner, who signed himself "Nearer 80 than 70," had sent 2s.

The Chairman (Mr. T. C. Lewis) Jolly good!

Supt. Baker added that the Salvation Army were ready to do all they could to help the woman.

The Diary of Despair.

The chairman thanked those who had sent money and had offered assistance.

"In the midst of your adversity," he told her, "there have been lots of kind friends about who are anxious to assist you. We hope you appreciate it, and we hope that in the future you will go on quite well."

The magistrates, added the chairman, were very sorry for her and the position in which she found herself.

Gilett's diary, which was produced in court was entitled "My Experiences in Bristol Looking for Work." One passage read at the last hearing stated that she had been up to the Suspension Bridge with the intention of "going over," but she had "lost her nerve."

Another entry paid tribute to a good Samaritan who had assisted her by giving her money for food.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN ROMEO

BY HERBERT FARJEON

NOT long ago I came across a leadorette in which the writer, after reminding his public of the fact that there is health of the mind as well as of the body, declared that art is the medicine we take to alleviate our complicated psychological and emotional troubles.

This is unquestionably true. Just as glycerine lozenges may be good for a sore throat, so "Romeo and Juliet" may be good for a sore heart. To join an amateur dramatic society may well be the remedy for the attack of blues.

One day, when this is fully realised by the medical fraternity, doctors may prescribe plays and players as they now prescribe physics and ointments, telling us that a little "Evening" taken before going to bed, should work wonders, or that a good course of Ralph Lynn should bring the desired relief.

And it may then be regarded as astonishing that in the bad old unenlightened days patients trusted entirely in their own judgment in the choice of shows.

The doctor of the future may, however, go even further than this.

Join the Society.

He may insist not merely that we shall go to see certain plays, but that we shall join our local amateur theatrical society and become actors and actresses ourselves.

If we are suffering because we are thwarted in our desire to be heroic, or in our desire to be apologetic, how much more satisfactory to play the part of Henry the Fifth or of Lady Sneerwell ourselves than to get professionals to do it for us!

There are, of course, many good reasons why we depend so heavily on the services of professional players.

For one, thing, they save us time. For another, they are so much more accomplished at the job than we should be.

And then again, although we may be as vain as the vainest actor-manager in the history of the theatre, does not this very vanity inspire most of us with an uneasy feeling (so often mistaken for modesty) that we may possibly, if we appear in public, merely make fools of ourselves?

Nevertheless, we all want to act. It is a primitive instinct. And though the self-consciousness begotten of civilisation may hold many of us back, the strength of this primitive instinct may be glimpsed to-day in the enormous number of amateur actors all over the country, who are now gathering in the suburbs of our cities and in the heart of our villages, to make up their minds what they shall act this autumn and who shall undertake the various parts.

What shall we act? That is the question. And too often the answer to it is dictated by a mistaken modesty which leads the performers into attempting creaky comedies and incredible little sketches about burglars in drawing-rooms that would tax the technique of the most accomplished professional, and even so keep the public at bay.

What amateur theatrical societies generally fail to realise is that a play with no life or depth in it is much more difficult to play sent entertainingly than a play that is vital and pregnant in every syllable.

Poor plays, if they are to be converted into good entertainments, require the most practised players.

But the better the play, the more safely it may be handed over to the tender mercies of the amateurs. "Hamlet" and "The Trojan Women" have so much to lose that they can lose much and still be numbered among the wealthy.

The time, however, may come when the preliminary committee meetings of amateur theatrical societies will be presided over by doctors or dental specialists, and when the plays now existing, being found unsuitable, will be replaced by others especially constructed for the needs of amateurs, and containing parts written expressly to suit the requirements of stock mental cases.

The performances I envisage will differ radically from those given by professional players, since in the amateur performances type-casting will be completely abandoned.

Filling the Parts.

Thus the doctor-producer, recognising that whereas the professional theatre exists for the audience, the amateur theatre exists for the actors, will probably see to it that the heroine, whose exquisite beauty all the other characters extol before she makes her appearance, is played by the ugliest lady in the cast.

The Samsonian parts he will no doubt hand over to weak little men suffering acutely from the physical inferiority complex.

Little children may be cast for the parts of adults, since they want to be grown-up, and adults for the parts of little children.

And perhaps the doctor-producer, having settled the requirements of his company and finding nothing on the market to anthem exactly, will write out a prescription—as "1 murderer, 3 mothers, 2 geniuses, 1 leader of society, 16 heroines"—and so, sending it round to the nearest author-chemist, have the play "made up."

LIFE OF SHAME

By Edward Kelly, White Slaver.

A screaming scandal threatens to rock England to the very bottom of its social foundation.

It has been left to us, in far off Hongkong, to call attention to this blot upon our fair name.

A girl hippopotamus has been shipped from Africa and landed at the London Zoo as a mate for the male hippopotamus already there.

What foul means were used to lure the innocent victim to this life of shame? Perhaps we shall never know. The white slavers do their vile work craftily and secretly, which is a bit annoying, because we'd like to know how it's done.

Probably she was lured to Europe with the promise of a great stage career awaiting her at a circus—and what does she find. She finds herself thrust into a sordid Zoo with the harsh words echoing in her ears, "If you want hay, you've got to earn it!"

Friendless and alone she appeals to the male hippopotamus. The inevitable happens. She falls.

And once a hippopotamus falls, it takes a block and tackle to get her up again.

The downward path opens before her . . . Drink . . . drugs.

Either that or she becomes hardened and starts a zoo of her own, and gets covered with diamonds and is called "Ma." But of what use is her gold and flattery. Other hippopotamuses nudge each other when she passes.

Respectable lady hippopotamuses who have realised that a woman's place is in the jungle, and have reared families, wave their back leg scornfully when they see her, and then go home and sit in the kitchen and gossip.

Her tawdry life is but an empty shell, and she dies surrounded by diamonds and empty champagne bottles—alone—all the respectable hippopotamuses having died long before.

Shall this sort of thing be allowed to go on unchecked by the authorities and uncommented on by "Pro Bon Publico" and "Father of Seven." No! No! No!

CHIEFLY NONSENSE

SHIPPING FIRM
SUEDPARCELS OF CLOTH
DETAINEDSEQUEL TO 3 A.M.
INCIDENT

The defence that the goods detained were smuggled goods was put forward by the Hing On Steam Navigation Company during the hearing of a case at the Supreme Court this morning before the Pulene Judge (Mr. Justice Wood).

Man Lai-wa, a shoemaker, of 5, Tai-Kok-Choi, claimed $133.07 for a quantity of cloth detained on October 2nd.

Mr. F. X. D'Almada, Jr., appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. H. Lo, of Messrs. Lo and Lo, for the defendants.

Plaintiff stated that on October 2nd, at about 3 a.m. he went to the Tai Ping Wharf to catch the junk going into the country. He was accompanied by his brother and a friend. His brother was carrying a parcel of cloth on his shoulder. They were stopped by the night-watchman who took the cloth from them and placed it in a shelter on the wharf saying the company had given him permission to do so.

The junk usually left at about 3 a.m. He arrived early because the Moon Festival was approaching and he was afraid the boat would be crowded. When the watchman took the cloth, he sent his brother to No. 7 Police Station and he himself remained on the wharf. The Police rang up the Company's Office on the telephone and asked the manager to go to the station. There the manager admitted taking the cloth giving his reason for so doing that the goods were being smuggled.

Witness bought the cloth on September 28th from the Feng Cheong Sung Firm. On the advice of the Police Officer he went to the S.C.A. with a petition. There he was advised to return to the Station where a Chinese detective would accompany him to the company's office for the return of the goods. The goods were never returned.

CONSTABLE'S STORY.

A Chinese constable stated that on October he was on duty at the junction of Connaught-Road West and Eastern Road and saw three Chinese coming towards him. When they saw him they hesitated and tried to turn back but when he spoke to them they stopped. He found cloth in their possession. He was carrying a parcel in his hand and another had two parcels under his arms. The third man was walking in front carrying nothing at all. He opened the parcels and examined them and was shown a bill in Chinese. When he had searched the men they went to the wharf gate. The first man went on the wharf and the other men handed the parcels over to him. The cloth was left on the wharf and the men went away and returned about 15 minutes later. In the meantime he woke up the night-watchman who took a lamp, boarded the junk, and returned with the cloth. When the men returned one told the watchman "You had better take $15 and give me back the cloth." The watchman refused and stated that he was going to hand it over to the company. One of the men then called witness to him and said "Constable, get him to take $20 and get us back the cloth." Witness said he would have nothing to do with it.

His Worship, Mr. Lo. Are you able to resist the claim on any legal ground? You have helped plaintiff very much by the evidence of the Police Constable.

Mr. Lo: The position of the company is difficult. They have to do their best to prevent people bringing goods on board their junks without declaration. I have no legal defence.

His Lordship gave judgment for plaintiff with costs.

THE ART OF FENCING.

Ladies' Fighting Ability to Be Rewarded.

LOCAL COMPETITIONS.

In order to promote further interest in the activities of the Hongkong Fencing Club a special cup has been presented by Capt. R. L. Burnett, R.N., President of the Club, for competition among members, while the Hon. Mr. E. R. Hallifax and Mrs. Hallifax have presented a cup for lady members.

The little known art of fencing is being very much revived in England, apart from any other reason, for promoting rapid thought and physical action, while in Hongkong there are quite a few persons who meet at the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club every week.

On Saturday last the club gave an exhibition at the Open Cruise of the Yacht Club and the guests and members showed extraordinary interest. The Fencing Club welcomes those who have a real desire to take an active interest. There is an elementary standard of instruction given by an honorary physical training instructor, and a more advanced standard of dealing with the more subtle experts of sword play is given by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. E. J. L. Loeke.

Members have been circulating regarding the two Cups which have been presented, as follows.

THE BURNETT CUP.

The President of the Club, Captain R. L. Burnett, R.N., is generously presenting a Trophy in the form of a Cup to be fought for annually by all the Members. It is his desire in making this very helpful gesture to promote a more active interest in sword play whilst giving the beginner a sound chance of success. Captain Burnett proposes therefore that the Cup shall be won by the Member making the most progress during the season. A small cup as a supporter will go with the Trophy the latter being held by the winner for twelve months. It is hoped to present this Cup at the closing Cruise of the Yacht Club some time in April and Captain Burnett will present this Cup on the advice of the hon. secretary.

THE HALLIFAX CUP.

The Fencing Club is also extremely indebted to The Hon. Mr. E. R. and Mrs. Hallifax for presenting a Cup to be won outright by the Lady member exhibiting the more finished style in conjunction with fighting ability. The details of this award will be discussed by the Committee.

LABOUR PARTY
CONFERENCEMR. WEDGWOOD BENN'S
OVATIONCHAIRMAN'S THREAT TO INTERRUPTORS

The Labour Party's annual conference opened with a breezy, cheery address by Mr. Geo. Latham, the Chairman.

He claimed that the Party had never been in better heart, and he pointed to the recent by-elections as evidence of their growing strength and of their perfect unity with the Trade Union and Co-operative movements.

Mr. Latham then attacked the Government for the future of its "old-fashioned Tory methods" of solving our difficulties, by reducing the purchasing power of the people and protecting the pockets of the well-to-do.

He pointed to the "infamous circular recently published by the Board of Education" as the latest example of "the Government's relentless pursuit of economy, regardless of social consequences."

Crisis Exploited.

He charged the Tory leaders with "exploiting a national crisis to further their own narrow party ends by forcing a comprehensive tariff system on the country."

He quoted the boast of the Central Council of the Conservative Party in its annual report, that "the most striking result of the policy of internal co-operation is to be seen in the fact that within six months of the National Government's formation the principle of Protection embodying a clear measure of Empire preference had become the law of the land as the considered decision of the nation, to which Free Traders were able to offer no opposition beyond a last gesture of protest."

Mr. Latham blamed the Liberals for having helped to lend effect to this Tory tactic by supporting the National Government, with resultant damage to "reform," reconstruction, disarmament, economic co-operation, education, the social services, the condition of the people, all matters which Liberals had claimed to hold dear.

It was idle to pretend that the outlook had become brighter. "The grim spectacle of 3,000,000 unemployed workers, of idle mines, idle mills and factories, and idle ships rusting at their anchors, is a sufficient answer to those who profess to see a lifting of the clouds."

He concluded by affirming the conviction of the Labour executive that "the only way out of the grave difficulties of our time is through courageous planning, national and international."

Loud applause acclaimed his declaration that Labour could only be justified as a Socialist body working towards a Socialist objective.

Mr. Henderson.

The general theme of the chairman's address was amplified by Mr. Arthur Henderson.

The Labour Party, he said, could not allow itself to become self-satisfied or complacent, but at the same time it must pursue its objects in its own way and must not allow itself to be diverted by sectional criticism.

There had been nothing more remarkable in the Party's history, he claimed, than the magnificent solidarity and devotion shown last year in face of the deadliest attack ever launched against a political party, and the rightness of their resistance had now been proved by the naked and unashamed Protectionist-Tory reaction of the National Government.

Circumstances and conditions, both national and international, have not confirmed us in our view and have given new emphasis to the need for drastic Socialism.

A new social order must be substituted for the present system. He concluded, amid loud cheers: "The future is ours if we will only grasp it."

The most rousing speech of the day was delivered by Mr. Wedgwood Benn on a resolution on India moved by Mr. Lansbury.

At the beginning of his speech the ex-Secretary for India was subjected to so many violent interruptions that the chairman had to threaten the expulsion of the interrupters.

Mr. Benn eloquently pleaded the difficulties and complexities of trying to govern India from a street in London without knowing exactly what was going on there.

In 1929 the Labour Government found almost universal boycott and mistrust, but after two years of patient endeavour, so general a spirit of co-operation had been awakened that a conference was sitting.

When success was within their grasp there came the General Election, and the Prime Minister hurriedly closed the conference.

policy, which was to get back to the will to peace.

The speech, delivered with tremendous spirit, carried the audience into the greatest enthusiasm of the day, and the resolution was passed unanimously.

"Beastly" Means Test.

Another animated discussion took place on a resolution demanding the withdrawal of the regulations governing the payment of unemployment insurance transitional benefit.

Mr. Ben Tillett, speaking with his old fiery vehemence, advocated a constructive and systematic organisation of protest from all Socialistic centres, trade union branches and Co-operative societies.

He ridiculed the armchair revolutionists and highbrow academic critics, and advised vital and robust open-air agitation.

Mr. Shinwell, Secretary of Mines in the late Labour Government, urged that Labour authorities should refuse to administer the means test and give the Commission as much trouble as they could.

Mr. Lansbury told how he and his Parliamentary colleagues had fought against "the beastly inflation," how they had been told that they did not represent the unemployed, who had repudiated them at the last election and had been quite agreeable to the equality of sacrifice they were now enjoying.

This resolution also was carried unanimously.

Twice during the day's debates the question arose of the Party's acceptance of office if opportunity occurred, and Sir Charles Trevelyan asked the Executive to state how it was proposed that the next Labour Government should be formed.

Mr. Henderson's official reply was that in the event of the opportunity another conference of the Party would immediately be convened to decide their action.

THE "ALL QUIET" OF 1932

A UNIVERSAL SUPER-PRODUCTION.

While it is a great responsibility to advise the public at large to see any certain picture, because tastes are so different, we do not hesitate to do so in the case of "The Doomed Battalion." It is more than a picture. It is an experience. It is not just a matter of taste; it is too big, too grand to miss satisfying all tastes. It has been described as "The picture terrific." Though this may sound extravagant, we know of no better way to describe it. If you care to see the new idea in picture making, if you love the dramatic, if you thrill at the idea of something totally new and different, if you want a complete change of scene and atmosphere, you will make it a special point to see "The Doomed Battalion." Incidentally it will be your first chance to see those two new stars of the screen, the exquisite Tala Birell and the great Luis Trenker.

BATTERY HOLD
WEAK TEAM

"NAP" AGAINST
R.E.s-

(By "Bully Off")

A depleted side representing H.M.S. Medway did well to play the 24th Battery to a draw in the Mamak Tournament yesterday, and by so doing they maintained the team's unbeaten record in the competition.

The sailors fielded a weakened side on account of a number of their players being away on patrol in Blue Bay, but they managed to hold the Army forwards well. The Medway were the first to score, netting their only goal in the first half, but after the interval the Battery equalised.

DECISIVE VICTORY.

The H.K.S. Battery gained a decisive victory over the Royal Engineers by five goals to nil at Soekumpoo yesterday. They were faster and their movements and stick-work were far superior. The Battery backs played remarkably well and as a result the Engineers were seldom able to penetrate the defence. At the interval the Battery led by three goals to nil and after the re-start added two more. For the winners Khudda Bux found the net twice and Lieut. Macfarlane, Bakhtawar Singh, and Gujjan Singh once each.

FRIENDLY.

A fast game with each side having a fair share of the exchanges was the result of the friendly meeting between H.M.S. Ostris and H.M.S. Proteus at King's Park yesterday. The Ostris forwards combined more effectively and made the most of their opportunities in front of goal. At the interval they had established a lead of three clear goals, and in the second half added one more the Proteus replying with two goals.

WATER POLO.

Two water polo matches were played in the Y.M.C.A. bath yesterday. After a fast game the Y.M.C.A. defeated a team from the Medway eight goals to one. Schroeder netted seven times for the "Y."

Teams from H.M.S. Kent and H.M.S. Bruce met later in the evening. The Kent men scored the only two goals of the match.

How Pataudi Scored His First Century on Australian Soil

TWO "LIVES" IN AN INNINGS OF BRILLIANT DRIVING

The Nawab of Pataudi's brilliant century in his first match on Australian soil was the outstanding feature of the match between the M.C.C. and Western Australia last month. The first day's play is described below:

The best exhibition of the day was that of the Nawab of Pataudi, who was eventually caught on the boundary. He gave one or two chances; but his innings was delightful to watch. He scored runs all round the wicket with an easy, graceful style. He thus joins the select band of Englishmen who have scored a century on a first appearance in Australia.

Sutcliffe played a chanceless, but cautious innings for 64, and Jardine cautiously brightly for 38. At one stage there were only three wickets down with 250 runs on the board; but a slump then set in, and wickets fell fast. Play ceased five minutes before the usual time on appeal against the light being upheld.

The Western Australians fielded keenly all day, few chances being missed. A feature was the exhibition of R. Bryant, the captain, at cover-point. Lovelock, behind the wickets, also gave a creditable exhibition. There was an attendance of about 4000.

THE PLAY.

Sutcliffe and Leyland opened the innings, Halcombe bowling to Sutcliffe, who turned his second ball nicely to square-leg for a single. Halcombe bowled fast on the leg side, and O'Shaughnessy, the other fast bowler, opened at the other end. Leyland played him with confidence, and the first four came when he covered him beautifully. Halcombe was bowling well, keeping a good length and bumping them at times. He had Sutcliffe troubled, and once appealed for l.b.w. against him, but was unsuccessful. Inverarity replaced O'Shaughnessy after he had bowled two overs, and in his first over, Leyland sent a short one to square-leg for an excellent four. On the second ball of Inverarity's second over he tried to do the same, but was caught close in at square-leg by O'Shaughnessy. He had been batting half an hour, and had scored 15, including three fours. Sutcliffe was then eight, and the total was 23.

Pataudi followed Leyland, and played a maiden from Halcombe. Play became very dull, and O'Shaughnessy, who took the ball from Halcombe's end, also had Sutcliffe troubled, the pitch at this end being troublesome. Pataudi started slowly, but was playing confidently, and glanced O'Shaughnessy twice for singles. At the end of an hour's play the score was one for 36, Sutcliffe being 16 and Pataudi three.

UNNECESSARY CAUTION.

Play livened up considerably in the next quarter of an hour, Sutcliffe being more at home against the new bowlers, Curtin and Martin. Twenty runs came up in ten minutes, Sutcliffe doing most of the scoring, twice hitting Curtin for four. Pataudi, who was using his feet nicely to Martin, drove the slow bowler to log several times. Generally, however, the batsmen were showing unnecessary caution as the bowling was only moderate. At the luncheon adjournment the score was 77, Sutcliffe being 40 and Pataudi 19.

O'Shaughnessy and Halcombe opened after lunch, and off the first two balls of O'Shaughnessy's second over Pataudi scored four. The first was a beautifully-driven leg drive, and the second, a good square cut. At 55 Martin replaced O'Shaughnessy, and Pataudi drove the third ball to mid-on.

T. A. Pearce to Play on Saturday

COUNTY CRICKETER IN LOCAL LEAGUE

T. A. Pearce, the Kent cricketer, is making his first appearance in local cricket on Saturday, when he will turn out for the Hongkong Cricket Club against the Navy in a First Division League match.

The son of "Tam" Pearce, who has been playing in Interport cricket for the past 30 years, "T.A." enjoyed the reputation whilst at Chatterhouse of being one of the finest schoolboy batsmen of his day.

When he later entered senior cricket, he made several successful appearances for Kent both in the first and second elevens.

207 NOT OUT.

This year he played four innings for the Kent 2nd XI, his average reading

Inns	N.O.	Highest	Total	Av.
4	2	207*	463	231.50

* signifies not out.

He is a brilliant forcing bat and his wide repertory of strokes allows him to score freely on both sides of the wickets.

The Club team to meet the Navy on Saturday at King's Park is:—A. W. Hayward (capt.), E. J. H. Mitchell, A. C. Beck, E. R. Duckitt, G. S. Dunkley, D. S. Harley, O. E. C. Marton, K. A. Munro, T. A. Pearce, A. Reid, J. P. Whitham.

SECOND STRING.

The Club second eleven to meet the Navy second string at the Club on Saturday will be:—C. E. Chahagan (Capt.), A. K. Mackenzie, H. J. Armstrong, P. E. Basket, L. A. R. Duncan, L. D. Kilbee, H. J. D. Lowe, A. D. Lowson, R. S. W. Patterson, P. W. J. Planer, J. E. Potter.

BOXING AT THE Y.M.C.A.

FORMATION OF PUPILS CLASS

ARMY INSTRUCTORS

In order to give members the opportunity of learning the art of self defence, and at the same time provide them with healthy recreation, the European Y.M.C.A. has inaugurated a boxing class, and last night members received their first instruction.

The class, which is open to members only, is being conducted by Capt. Elliot-Heywood, with the assistance of three South Wales Borderers instructors, Cpl. Evans, Private Roberts and Private Mori.

Last night the class was held in the West Lounge, but it is hoped to instal a boxing ring on the Badminton court in the near future, which will remain a permanent structure.

No little interest was displayed yesterday in this new activity of the Y.M.C.A., and it is expected that the class will very quickly enlarge its membership.

Capt. Elliot-Heywood and his assistants intend to explain and teach the complete fundamentals of boxing, and the Y.M.C.A. owe them a debt of gratitude for coming forward and offering their services in this manner.

The next class will be held at 6.30 p.m. on Wednesday, and thereafter will meet every Wednesday evening.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The glorious romance of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," as vivified in the Fox production featuring Marian Nixon and Ralph Bellamy, is coming to the King's Theatre on Sunday. The choice of dainty, appealing Miss Nixon and tall, handsome Bellamy to enact the leading roles in this important picture came, it is said, as a reward for splendid work in recent successes.

Miss Nixon, it will be recalled, scored individually opposite Charles Farrell in "After Tomorrow," then repeated her success in her brilliant performance with Warner Baxter in "Amateur Daddy." Bellamy, who until now has had the up-hill struggle of establishing himself in unenviable, or "heavy" roles, was given the romantic part of Dr. Adam Ladd in which he portrayed the German officer in "Surrender," his important character study of the Juvenile Court Judge in "Young American," and of the incorruptible police captain in "Disorderly Conduct."

Lavishness of production in both locale and settings is promised in the current version of the Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson masterpiece. It was filmed on a specially reconstructed Sunnybrook Farm, near Santa Cruz, California, with the reproduction of a New England blizzard in which the dramatic climax occurs.

Briefly, the film story recounts the main adventures of Rebecca, as immortalized in the book, revolving around her intense desire to win the regard of her spinster aunt; her interest in obtaining a wedding ring for the unwed mother of Jack-O-Lantern, and her romance with Dr. Adam Ladd. Mac Mearns, as Aunt Jane, and Louise Clouser Hall, as Aunt Miranda, portray the aged spinster aunts of Rebecca.

Amusing Comedy at Queen's.

For sheer fun, few comedies of the current season excel the hilarity of "Cracked Nuts," now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

Based on a ludicrously funny situation, the picture carries its two stars, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, through an amazing series of comic and thrilling situations.

The story is laid in a mythical kingdom whose subjects are almost evenly divided between deposed kings and menacing executioners. Its most important monuments are tombstones dedicated to the memories of beheaded rulers.

Into this chaotic country come—Wheeler and Woolsey with the intention of usurping the vacant crown. They dodge executioners, stage thrilling battles with tanks and aeroplanes, ing battles with tanks and aeroplanes, hire executioners galore and finally come to the conclusion that Chicago is a tame spot in comparison.

The story is an original by that most master of comedy acting Douglas Maclean, in collaboration with Al Boasberg.

"Love Me To-night."

Hollywood put a horse under contract to toss Maurice Chevalier from his back in "Love Me To-night," now showing at the King's Theatre. The sequence shows a hunt at a country estate. Maurice, in the role of a tailor impersonating a baron, and trying his damndest to impress Jeannette MacDonald, a woman of aristocratic family, almost reveals his true identity by his bad riding.

His wit, however, saves the day after his spill from the horse, and soon Jeannette has yielded to his charms. But the secret of his identity comes out anyhow, and then it requires an amusing, but at the same

YOU GET WHAT YOU WANT—

If You Want It Badly Enough.

Most people want to be wealthy, but they don't want money so badly that they will work hard enough to get it. So they just remain poor and envious of others. Many people yearn for abounding health and vigour, and yet they will not make that sustained effort which they know will give such wonderful returns in happiness.

To be well you must have the will to be well. If you are ailing, either seriously or slightly, no one can help you more than yourself. Take a firm resolve and carry it through. If you are run-down and weak don't wait until you are a confirmed invalid, but start on a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the old and tried blood and nerve tonic. And make up your mind to give them a thorough trial—not a half-hearted one. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enable the system to increase and enrich its blood supply, thereby bringing new strength to nerves and renewed energy to the faded tissues. For anaemia, (blood impoverishment) and its consequences; pallor, emaciation, weakness, neurasthenia, insomnia, digestive troubles, women's ailments, rheumatism and sciatism you need the new supplies of rich, pure blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can give you. Nothing else can be so surely relied upon.

time romantic climax, to straighten things up to everyone's satisfaction.

"The Happy Ending."

For the "shipwreck" scenes of "The Happy Ending," the next attraction at the Queen's and Ian Hay's popular story, Millard Webb had the privilege of using a giant Cunarder.

Over four hundred extras took part in the scene, to enact a panic-stricken mob of passengers, clamouring to be saved from the sinking liner and filling to overflowing the boats.

The big thrill of the night was when one of the boats fouled its davits, and tilting at a terrific angle, threw its human cargo into the water. With remarkable good fortune, only four minor casualties occurred although there were some ugly moments. At one time a man, his leg caught in the rigging of the capsize boat, was pinned under water.

This scene is particularly thrilling in the film, being the highlight of an engrossingly human story of sacrifice.

"Night World."

The horrible monster who thrilled and chilled the World in "Frankenstein" is back on the screen. But this time it is without the spectacular makeup that Boris Karloff captures audiences at the Central Theatre in "Night World," a Universal production. He plays the part of "Happy" MacDonald, a cabaret proprietor, and plays it in his usual polished manner. "Night World" stars Lew Ayres and Mae Clarke and is different to the kind of screen entertainment we have been having here for sometime.

"Travelling Husbands"

The worry of thousands of grass widows whose husbands flood railways and hotels of the world in quest of the big orders, finds its answer in "Travelling Husbands," which commences at the Central Theatre to-morrow. Nor does it stop at telling where he is, but shows what he does and with whom. The "with whom" according to this unusual film, is usually a blonde who serves as model party girl and entertainer. "Travelling Husbands" achieves an intimacy, a distinctive humour, a whizzing pace, that strikes a new high note in film entertainment. Evelyn Brent heads the cast, and is supported by Frank Albertson, Constance Cummings, Hugh Herbert, Stanley Fields and Frank McHugh. It is not often that screen fare of "Travelling Husbands" calibre is offered. It is a film well worth seeing.

HELD PRISONER

MR. LI KUO-CHIEH UNDER
POLICE GUARD

Shanghai, Nov. 14.
Mr. Li Kuo-chieh, former Director of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company, who has been held under supervision in the Municipal Government building, is now actually a prisoner, not being allowed to see guests and being kept under police guard.

He will be held pending the result of the investigations by the new administration under Mr. Liu Hung-shen, who assumed his office this morning.

Interviewed by Reuter, Mr. Chu Chin-hua stated the loan was signed by Li Kuo-chieh with the China Realty Co. The C.M.S.C. had not reported to the Government after the signature and the Ministry of Communications had not been informed of the nature of the agreement. When the Communications Ministry asked about the agreement, Li Kuo-chieh sent a duplicate agreement to the Ministry.

Four Annexes.
It is understood that the agreement had four annexes, the nature of which has not been revealed. Li Kuo-chieh will be held until all documents, including the annexes have been examined. The Government is not prepared to recognize the agreement if it in any way infringes Chinese rights to the C.M.S.C.

It is again emphasized that as the agreement was concluded without the sanction of the Ministry of Communications it could not be considered valid.

Marquis Li Kuo-chieh is the grandson of the famous Marquis Li Hung-chang.—Reuter Special.

JAPANESE DISCORD

APPREHENSION

Tokyo, Nov. 14.
Increasing criticism and apprehension is being voiced regarding the financial situation and the Cabinet's persistence in the present budget policy of unlimited borrowing and filling a huge deficit by an issue of bonds.

The Seiyukai appear to be divided between a desire to debate the Government for agreeing to such a huge expenditure and a desire to criticise the failure to agree to a larger expenditure for emergency relief.

Newspapers warn the Seiyukai that the present is not the time for bickering and intrigue, but that the entire nation must rally behind those who to-day are guiding the destinies of the Japanese Empire.—Reuter.

SENATOR'S OPINION.

UNWILLING TO IMPOSE TAX
ON U.S. PEOPLE

Washington, Nov. 14.
Senator Walsh, who is considered to be in the highest democratic councils, said to-day that if the debt question was urgent, and it was necessary to dispose of it forthwith, a special session of Congress should be called.

Senator Swanson, who will succeed Senator Borah as Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in the Senate, said that the United States people were loath to relieve the tax burden on foreigners and impose them on themselves. Many of the nations involved were superior to the United States, industrially and financially.—Our Own Correspondent.

SIKH ANNIVERSARY.

FAITH CELEBRATED

Members of the Sikh Community celebrated the birthday of the founder of their religion, Sri Guru Nanak Dev Ji, at the Sikh Temple Hongkong and Kowloon Docks yesterday.

The mission of Sri Guru Nanak Dev Ji was told by Mr. Purdaman Singh, the former Secretary of the Sikh community, and by Mr. Awtar Singh, the Secretary of the Hongkong Sikh Temple.

The religious performances being over, the party from the Kowloon Docks Temple congregated at the Kowloon Indians Tennis Club to witness the Children Sports staged by Mr. Sapooran Singh. There were numerous entries for the various events and keen interest was shown by all the children present. The presence of several Indian ladies went a long way to make this function a great success. Amongst the numerous interested spectators was the Club's Secretary Mr. Foruz Ali, Mr. Kehar Singh one of the pillars of the Sikh community distributed the prizes at the conclusion of the Sports.

The next item on the programme was the "Kavi Darbar" which was opened by Mr. Purdaman Singh the former Secretary of the Hongkong Sikh Temple, amidst deafening cheers. The Kavis (Poets) read their poems which dealt chiefly with the teachings of Guru Nanak Ji with deserving applause from the interested audience.

This concluded the evening's programme and the guests were then entertained to a happy dinner party at the club pavilion. This was accompanied by Radio broadcast from various Indian stations, through the courtesy of Mr. J. M. Shroff who very kindly installed his wireless receiver at the club for this function.

After a very enjoyable evening the party dispersed at midnight with happy recollections of the evening and a vote of thanks to the Hon. Treasurer Mr. Bachan Singh Dhillon for his untiring efforts to make this function such a great success.

FORCED WIFE TO CONFESS

SEAMAN'S CONDUCT UNAVAILING

A despicable character was given to Siu Fong, seaman, who, charged before Mr. Schofield at the Central Court to-day with keeping an opium divan and with possessing monopoly opium, laid the responsibility on his wife. The reason alleged by the prosecution was that he has lately taken unto himself a concubine and it would suit him to have his wife in prison out of the way.

Revenue Officer Ward testified that when he raided No. 1, Centre Street yesterday, opium was being boiled over a chetty, while in a room Siu Fong was entertaining six "customers." He looked as if he would own up when taxed but at that moment he looked at his wife and muttered something to her in an undertone. She, between muttering and hesitating, then admitted keeping the divan and possessing the opium. She was not accepted as the sacrifice, and it was the man who had to answer the charges.

Siu Fong was fined a total of $270 with the alternative of five weeks' hard labour.

TRUMPED UP CASE

INDIAN P.C. TO BE PUT ON REPORT

When Rohmat Khan, an Indian policeman, appeared before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court to-day to press a charge of assault against Hui Yiu, a factory operative, he found the tables turned against him. He is to be placed on a departmental report for trumping up a case.

Shortly after one o'clock this morning, it was stated, he brought Hui Yiu to West Point Station and charged him with resisting search. He alleged that Hui Yiu struck him.

An entirely different complexion was given to the case when Hui Yiu told the Court that it was the constable who assaulted him. He said the constable slapped him, then struck him on the chest, and finally, he lunged out with his foot. Hui Yiu showed marks of the assault, and offered to bring forward a companion who was a witness to the incident.

Inspector McWalter was inclined to believe Hui Yiu's story, and said it looked as if the constable really had made a mistake in arresting the Chinese and had invented his story to cover the mistake.

"If your Worship will discharge the defendant, I will see that the Indian is dealt with departmentally," he told the Magistrate. Hui Yiu was discharged.
